SCHOOLING

New drivers must go through certified instructor

BY BONNIE CULVERHOUSE | bonnie@press-herald.com

With more than 71,000 Louisiana drivers obtaining a learner's permit or first time license each year, the Office of Motor Vehicles is urging citizens to ensure their local driver education provider is properly certified and licensed through the State of Louisiana - a step that is now required by law.

Elizabeth Hollingsworth, owner of Lucky Brake Driving Academy LLC, says students and instructors are required to know and do the same

"We have to go through the same things the kids do," she said. "We have to take the driver's education class under a school that is already open. We have to do the whole thing - the classroom portion and the behind-the-wheel train-

But that's where the similarities stop.

"It took me about six months to do the curriculum and take the tests and then to be approved by the state," Hollingsworth said. Then, we are also required to have a million dollars in liability insurance and a $40,000 bond."

Continuing education is part of the process of being a certified trainer.

Continuing education is part of process of being a certified trainer

"We have to do two classes each year to stay current," she said. "Of course, there are background checks through state police since we're working with children."

Currently, 187 licensed driver education providers across the state meet the criteria to be officially recognized by the OMV Training and Certification Unit.

It's a process that has changed since the time when high schools were the only avenue to driver's education for the teenager who wants to borrow dad's car.

"You have to spend eight hours in the car with the driver and it can only be one student at a time," Hollingsworth said. "You can't count riding time as driving time."

Age of the student doesn't matter.

"It doesn't matter if you're 15, 25 or 55, the same rules apply," she said. "My oldest student has been 62, so far. They have to go through the classes as a first-time driver would, no matter the

Sam Mims talks on progress of racism in Minden

MICHELLE BATES michelle@press-herald.com

He's outspoken. He stands up for what he believes is right, and he is a man of God.

Sam Mims makes no bones about being outspoken. He believes in "telling it like it is."

Mims recalls a time when he knew racism, even calling himself a racist at one time. Today, he says Minden has made progress, but more could be done.

Mims says the right to vote is very important to him because he remembers what it took to get that right.

"A lot of people died black and white - for us black people to have the right to vote and to be treated fairly and equally," he said. "Then I see people now who are too trifling or too whatever to benefit from that. We had to do things (to get that right), so now I think the least I can

He is a 1964 graduate of Webster High School and went on to Southern University in Baton Rouge. The day he graduated from college in 1969, he joined the ranks of the U.S. Army.

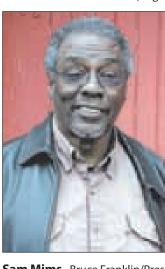

"I remember not being able to go to LSU," he said. 'Not because I wanted to go, but because I just couldn't.

He says somewhere in his college years, the Lord "delivered him from racism."

"I didn't like white folks," he said. "I grew up here and to my way of thinking, I had no reason to like white folks. I'd seen enough mistreatment of myself and my family, so I wasn't crazy about white people. I didn't know about Jesus, so I didn't know about all that stuff. You just go by your external environment."

He vividly recalls the day he was "delivered from racism." In December 1965, he was on a train from Baton Rouge to Minden – at the time, Minden had a train depot. He had a girlfriend in Minden and one in Shreve-

Webster tax assessor announces savings for municipalities

PAT CULVERHOUSE

Seven Webster Parish municipalities, plus the Webster Parish Sheriff's Office, will be seeing a significant savings to their budgets following a Thursday meeting with parish assessor Morris Guin.

Historically, the eight entities have been required to pay the assessor's office an annual fee for processing municipal tax notices. That won't be happening anymore, effective immediately, Guin says.

charge to the municipalities and the WPSO, which will benefit Webster Parish tax payers," Guin said in a news release.

Guin met with the sheriff and the mayors of Doyline, Minden, Sarepta and Sibley Thursday at Minden City Hall and explained why his office would no longer charge the fee. Earlier in the week, Guin held a similar sit-down with the mayors of Cullen, Cotton Valley and Springhill.

Forgiving the fee means Sheriff Gary Sexton's office

tant to everyone," Guin said during the meeting. "It was sort of a labor charge to the sheriff and the municipalities that we really don't need. We're here to tell you that you will not get another bill from us anymore."

Guin says his office could have found something to do with the money. But, comparing this fee cancellation to the return of $500,000 to parish taxpayers last year, the money wasn't a factor in operating the assessor's

"It's a little like the $500,000, we could have hired more people, but we don't have the liability you all have," he said. "The sheriff has 'x' number of employees, we have eight, nine counting me. We've got two vehicles, the sheriff has probably 100 and the City of Minden has many.'

Guin says new technology expedites the processing of all tax notices, and that's one reason his office can return the money.

"We do things a lot quicker now than 15 to 20 need to charge for this," he "I'm the biggest benefactor of this and I really appreciate what you do, Sheriff Sexton said. "This will help on the aerial imagery we're about to do in the next few years."

"We're the next largest and you may think $6,500 doesn't mean a lot to the city, but in this day and age, we have to watch our around here." Minden Mayor Tommy Davis said. "This is a good thing for

A representative for the U.S. Army introduced herself as Christina Curley, communications specialist for the Army. After her introduction, Col. Sam Mims (Ret.), a 30-year veteran of the same Armed Forces branch and a dialogue committee member, expressed his disappointment in their silence. "It's just disturbing to me that the Army has refused to come to the table and participate in this process," he said, emphasizing the remark wasn't directed at Curley. "As I said, this has nothing to do with you, but it just bothers me the institution I spent 30 years with is not willing to come to the table and deal directly in this dialogue process.'

True to what he said, Curley stayed silent throughout most of the call, only answering a few questions or saying she would take it to their experts with the Department of the Army in Wash-

"This is because of much lower explosive properties of propellants compared to TNT (an energetic in explosives)," he said. "They are designed for much higher explosive materials, like TNT. In general, when I looked over all these technologies, struck me that using the Kiln incinerator might be the best way to deal with these materials, under the conditions that this Kiln incinerator would be possible to set up on the site in some reasonable time manner, properly equipped with post-combustion treatment."

Doug Sarno, facilitator, says the incinerator is one of the processes that has the capacity to handle larger batches than others. But the drawback, Lomnicki says, is the fact that detonation chambers' capacity to destroy materials by pounds per load is very

Each one discussed came down to volume, capacity and availability and other limitations.

As discussion continued, the Army and the EPA still remained silent. Frances Kelley, Louisiana Progress Action and dialogue committee member, called them on it, saying the ones who should be offering the expertise are those on the panel, not the facilitator – stressing that she wasn't chastising approach to handling the meeting, only that it was a "process concern."

"I am deeply uncomfortable with the way this call has gone today," she said, "and I feel like we need to have the committee members be the ones discussing more of the technical aspects of the different technologies, and we need to be backing that up with research and citations. And I understand that it's just a rough draft, but I feel like these conversations are going to shape our future conversations, and we have to be doing this the right way.

"I also want to comment that this has never been done before," she continued. "There's never been, as far as I know, a pile of hazardous waste that has to be disposed of as quickly as this one. We have to find a solution here. We have to be creative, and we have to find something that will work, and not just rule out all these things because they haven't dealt with bulk M6 propellant in this particular way in the past."

Castella Ruth Harville

Castella Harville, 83, long-time resident of Webster Parish, went peacefully home to be with her Lord and Savior Feb. 25, 2015, in Minden.

Funeral services for Castella Harville will be at 11 a.m., Saturday, Feb. 28, 2015, at First Assembly of God Church in Minden. Officiating will be the Rev. Russell Snider and the Rev. Dee Anders, pastor of First Assembly of God in Minden. Interment will follow in Gardens of Memory Cemetery in Minden.

The family will receive friends from 5 until 7 p.m., Friday Feb. 27 at Rose Neath Funeral Home in Minden.

Ms. Harville was born Sept. 30, 1931, in Yazoo City, Mississippi. She married the love of her life June 5, 1950. They moved to Minden, in 1966 with their children where she spent her time as wife, mother, homemaker raising her children and also worked outside the home some of her years. Her life was centered on her family, friends and her church – letting her light shine for the Lord. She was a faithful member of First Assembly of God of Minden for 48 years. She is well known in Minden for her time spent working at the dental office of Dr. Williams. Always showing love and kindness to all she knew or met, always a smile and encouraging words to share. The word most used to describe this precious lady is SWEET. She enjoyed life, always ready to have a party.

She leaves behind with her family and friends so many precious memories of time spent with her. She was always quick to reach out to help whenever she saw a need - from cooking a meal for someone to spending time in prayer. The peace of the Lord, like a dove resting on her shoulders, remained with her until her last breath. Ms. Harville was foremost a devoted wife, mother and grandmother. She was dearly loved by her family and will be greatly missed. We rejoice for the celebration of life we know through knowing

She is survived by her daughter, Carmen Dews; son, Lee E. Harville Jr. and wife, Margaret; son-in-law, Joe Metzger; sister, Vera McMicheal; grandchildren, Brian Reeve, Amy Metzger, Lisa Bass and husband, Andrew, Anna Bunch and husband, Michael and Karen Harville; greatgrandchildren, Cameran Reeve, Colin, Alison and Kaitlyn Bass and Landyn Pharr.

The family appreciates everyone's thoughts and prayers.

PERSPECTIVE

Christian lambs to the slaughter

THE UNITED NATIONS has just issued a new report documenting "widespread human rights violations" by ISIS. Even the UN's human rights boss, who has seen his share of atrocities, admitted to being "deeply shocked."

Let's not mince words about these "violations." The ISIS savages are guilty of rape, slavery, child abuse, beheading, crucifixion, and more. And while many ethnic and religious minorities are under siege, their favorite targets seem to be Christians.

This week, another 150 Assyrian Christians were kidnapped in Syria and taken hostage by ISIS. The Assyrians have practiced Christianity since the 6th Century and still speak a language very similar to that spoken by Jesus himself.

Now, dozens of these peaceful people, among them babies and the elderly, face the distinct possibility of being slaughtered. Exterminated. Just as Coptic Christians in Egypt and Assyrian Christians in Iraq were exterminated in recent weeks.

O'REILLY

The depravity of ISIS has overshadowed that other Islamist terror group Boko Haram. Those evildoers kidnapped hundreds of schoolgirls in Nigeria last year, most of them Christian. Boko Haram killed an estimated 2,500 people last year, usually targeting communities inhabited by Chris-

And now? There has been a spate of suicide bombings in Nigeria carried out by young girls. It is presumed that Boko Haram is forcing its kidnapped prey to don suicide vests. Just try to envision the sickness required to strap a bomb to a little girl, send her into a crowded market, and detonate an explosion that kills dozens of innocents.

Fox News analyst Lt. Col. Ralph Peters describes what is happening as nothing less than a religious cleansing. "What we are seeing," he said Wednesday morning, "is an Islamist attempt to exterminate the last vestiges of Christian civilization in the Middle East ... it is a genuine Holocaust against "Holocaust" is a charged word, but we are witnessing the systematic execution of people because of their religion. And just as the world watched and dithered in the 1930s, little is being done to confront the ISIS menace that has spread across the Middle East and North Africa.

President Obama heralds a "60-nation coalition," but it has been invisible. Air strikes are sparse and ground action is shunned as a last resort. Instead, the White House holds conferences on "violent extremism," the State Department implies that a jobs program will assuage the nihilists of ISIS, and the United Nations issues reports.

Meanwhile, the savages continue their march of terror. Commentary Magazine put it this way: "ISIS has not lost any of the enormous territories it overran in 2014, it has also shown itself capable of conducting operations on different fronts simultaneously." In other words, ISIS is looking more and more like a varsity squad of killers.

Some Christians and Kurds are now fighting back against ISIS in northeastern Syria, where the latest abduction occurred. And the Pentagon confirmed that a few airstrikes were carried out in the region where the Assyrian Christians were kidnapped. But so much more is needed.

Col. Peters put it very bluntly Wednesday morning on Fox: "Christians are tortured and even crucified publicly and our president does nothing; Christian women are kidnapped and raped and our president does nothing." He concluded by comparing President Obama to one of the greatest villains of the Christian religion.

Is Col. Peters guilty of hyperbole? Perhaps. But many world leaders are guilty of something far, far Terrorists everywhere: Get a job!

In the years when us old folks had to shoo Pterodactyls off our antennas in order to get good reception, Art Linkletter had a most amusing television show, "House Party." A segment of that show, "Kids Say The Darndest Things," became a staple of television, led to a series of books and even continued with comedian Bill

 Explanation: For the younger reader, there were no cable or satellite reception mechanisms, only a piece of multi-pronged aluminum sitting atop another piece of aluminum. Amazingly, it received broadcast signals from as far away as Moor-

If Mr. Linkletter were alive today, he could have spun off another, equally interesting, piece. A title, perhaps, "Grownups Say The Silliest Things, Especially Bureaucrats, Politicians and Public Figures." Material would never be a problem.

One example: State Department deputy spokesperson Marie Harf forgot the Abraham Lincoln rule about remaining silent during an appearance on "Hardball with Chris Matthews" to address State's strategy toward ISIS. It would have been much more simple, and far less embarrassing, if Harf had simply admitted, "We have no strategy."

Instead, the woman who, at age 33 can truly be called a career bureaucrat, proclaimed, after opining this country "cannot kill our way out of this war" on terror, "We need in the medium-to-longer term to go after the root causes that leads people to join these groups, whether it's lack of opportunity for jobs..."

Of course (hand slap to forehead). Why didn't someone think of that sooner? If Islamist terrorists, nay, every terrorist in the world, had a good job, there would be little reason for concern. There might be the occasional dust up over low wages or workplace conditions or benefits but certainly no bombs, bullets or blades.

The views expressed on this page do not necessarily represent the views of the Minden Press-Herald or Specht Newspapers, Inc.

But wait. Someone asking a devoted terrorist might find they already have a job. It's called killing people. In many cases, those people who are murdered share a faith with their murderers. Still, the life work of a terrorist is taking lives. They consider themselves soldiers. They get paid to behead, burn and bomb.

For a person who began her career at the Central Intelligence Agency (in her case, an oxymoron), seems Harf realize should there's no way a dedicated, fanatical, died-in-the-wool jihadist will replace a single page of the Ouran with the classified section of the New York Times.

There are a couple of scary points to the Harf episode. First, she was on the team that helped CULVERHOUSE shape President Obama's national security and communications strategy during the 2012 presidential campaign. She also spoke on behalf of the administration on national security issues. Feel more secure already?

Next, after the firestorm of criticism broke about her head following the job statement, she did not backtrack or tell us what she really meant. Instead, she claimed on CNN that her argument is "too nuanced" for her critics to understand. In bureaucratese, that means we're too stupid to understand the depth and brilliance of her observations.

It also means there's nothing we can do about it. Unfortunately, she's right about that. She's still a clueless mouthpiece and will go nowhere but up in the bureaucratic morass that is Washington, D.C. In the nation's capitol, it seems, incompetence is a virtue. Campaign alert

Money is both the bane and baby's breath of political campaigns, and the old adage, "A fool and his money are soon elected" is being altered slightly to "Any fool with the most money can be elected." The fools may be doing the running, but it's a bunch of pretty sharp cookies raising the dough.

In the money raising game, there aren't many cookies sharper than those named Clinton. If any are more adept at raising funds, they're working for the Clintons. And with Hillary apparently loading the guns for a 2016 shootout, not even national boundaries seem to limit fundraising by the foundation that bears the family

And, some are wondering, would a President Clinton look more favorably on the bigs that donated lotsa money to her foundation than she would on millions of littles who pulled her lever.

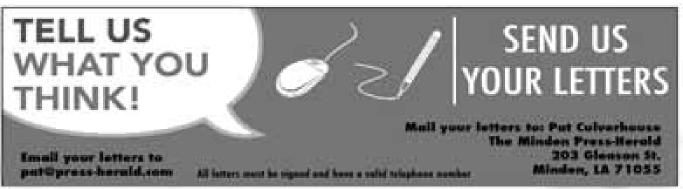

If the donors are more highly favored, then Saudi Arabia, Oman, the United Arab Emirates, Canada's foreign affairs (ironic) department and other foreign governments and individuals are in the catbird's seat. As usual, the great unwashed would be the bird inside the cat.

A question candidate Clinton might have to answer if/when she runs for the Democratic nomination would be to whom her allegiance lies if a choice had to be made between the people she is elected to serve and an entity which donated millions to the Clinton Foundation.

One problem is finding someone to ask the question. Another problem is finding enough voters to pay attention to the answer, if one is forthcom-

BLACK HISTORY MONTH ESSAY CONTEST WINNER

After The 3-Room Wooden School House

BY TAITEUNA RABB

Editor's note: The winner of the Minden Press-Herald's Black History Month essay contest In the 4th through 8th grade category is Taiteuna Rabb, a fifth grader from Doyline. There were no submissions in the 9th-12th grade category. Taiteuna's essay is published below.

After The 3-Room Wooden School House

My older relatives often talk about how they walked many miles as students to their 3-Room Wooden School House. There was no indoor toilets and a preacher brought wood to the school in a horsedrawn wagon for the wood burning heaters and stove.

In 1956, a lot of black children from different communities rode buses to the new school named Union Elementary. They were so happy and surprise to see indoor toilets, running water, and no wood burning heaters and stove. They thought they were in heaven.

One of my aunts was Union's first secretary, first kindergarten teacher and she later became the school's principal.

I loved Union Elementary school. I met many friends and had great teachers.

Sadly, Union Elementary school is torn down. This school was a miracle to many black students, after the 3-Room Wooden School House.

Minden Press-Herald publisher Gregg Parks presents 10-year-old Taiteuna Rabb, a 5th grader at Doyline, with a check as winner of the Black History Month essay contest in the 4th through 8th grade category. Bonnie Culverhouse/Press-Herald

NANCY'S KITCHEN

Chow down, warm up with chowder

Today I am viewing the beautiful snowy wonderland from the window of my cozy warm house, sipping on Hot Raspberry Scripture Tea and munching Glazed Animal Cookies. The scene is like a Colorado picture postcard.

I have not even left the house to pick up the newspaper or mail. I did briefly brave it off the patio to scoop up a bowl of snow and made a bowl of snow ice cream; a rare treat in this part of the country.

I have not left the house since leaving church Sunday morning and the pantry is beginning to look a bit bare.

I like having soup when it is cold weather. I have often make Corn Chowder but came across this recipe for Cauliflower Chowder. Except for the milk, most of the ingredients are staples in my kitchen. Since I do not keep milk in my house, I would substitute canned evaporated milk.

The only ingredient I then would have to purchase would be the cauliflower. I think this recipe will be a KEEPER; I plan to try it soon.

CAULIFLOWER CHOWDER

- 4 slices bacon, diced 2 Tbsp. unsalted butter 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 onion, diced 2 carrots, peeled & diced
- 2 sticks celery, diced 1/4 cup all-purpose flour 4 cups chicken broth
- 1 cup 2 percent milk (I would substitute canned evaporated milk)

1 head cauliflower, roughly chopped

1 bay leaf

Kosher salt & freshly ground black pepper, to taste

2 Tbsp. chopped fresh parsley

Heat a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add bacon and cook until brown and crispy, about 6-8 minutes. Transfer to a paper towel-lined plate; set aside.

Melt butter in a large stock pot or Dutch oven over medium-heat.

Add garlic, onion, carrots and celery.

Cook stirring occasionally, until tender, about 3-4 minutes.

Whisk in flour and stir until lightly browned, about 1 minute.

Gradually whisk in chicken broth and milk and cook, whisking constantly until slightly thickened, about 3-4 minutes. Add cauliflower and bay leaf.

Bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer until cauliflower is tender, about 12-15 minutes; season with salt & pepper to taste. If the chowder is too thick, add more milk as needed until desired consistency is reached.

Serve immediately; garnished with bacon and parsley, if desired.

I am off to the kitchen to bake a pan of cornbread and heat a can of Progresso Vegetable soup.

COLLEGE BB LaTech pulls away from UTEP

RUSTON - Louisiana Tech has accomplished a lot of things this season, but the one thing they had not done was have any wire-to-wire wins. That changed on Thursday night and it was a good time to do it as the Bulldogs led the entire 40 minutes while running away from UTEP in a 77-60 victory in front of 5,126 fans inside the Thomas Assembly Center.

The win kept LA Tech (22-7, 13-3 C-USA) in first place in the league standings, extended the home winning streak to 27 games and ended UTEP's C-USA) (19-8, 11-4 seven-game winning streak coming in.

"It was a huge game," head coach Michael White said. "We played a very good team with a very good coach and a very good staff. BLAKE BRANCH

Webster Parish received almost 4 inches of snow Wednesday, as baseballs were replaced with snowballs.

With most of North Louisiana covered in snow - and more rain and thunderstorms expected to begin next week - area baseball coaches have been scrambling to adjust.

Practice schedules have been changed, tournament games rescheduled or canceled, and travel plans carefully dissected.

Here is a look at how each area team has coped with the elements, as well as a preview of where you can hope to find each team over the weekend and into next week. Minden Crimson Tide

The Crimson Tide took on Captain Shreve on Thursday and will face the Haughton Buccaneers Friday at 5 p.m.

"Surprisingly nothing has changed with our schedule," Tide head coach Dean Francis said. "It's cold like this every year at this time. Here we are going into a game with 5 days off in a row, but everyone's in the same boat as us. It's tough when you get in a groove and then you have five days off. I bet we could beat anybody if we played in a gym as much time as we've spent in there."

Lakeside Warriors The Lakeside baseball team will compete in the North Desoto tournament against Loyola Friday at 3 p.m. and then again versus Northwood Saturday at 5

"This is the time of year you need to get better," head coach Bob Gray said. "There's no way you can get that done if you can't get on the field. These first 10 ball games are vitally important to your season. This has kind of put a hinderance on that process."

'House of Cards' dealt Netflix a winning hand

SAN FRANCISCO — Even if it never wins another award, "House of Cards" already ranks among the most influential series in television his-

The political drama launched Netflix's expansion into original programming two years ago, a risky bet that might have toppled the Internet video service had "House of Cards" flopped and squandered its estimated $100 million investment. Instead, the show was an immediate hit with viewers and critics, giving Netflix the financial clout and creative firepower to further transform how we watch and define "television." And it spurred other online services such as Amazon.com Inc. and Google's YouTube to spend more on their own original content to create shows that rival those produced by broadcast and cable channels.

early Friday, giving fans a chance to see Frank and Claire Underwood continue their machinations, now from a hard-won White House perch. The show marks just one of more than 20 original series or movies that Netflix is scheduled to show this year. Producing that much original content would have seemed like a long shot before "House of Cards" first established Netflix as more than a convenient and cheap way to watch recycled TV series and movies previously released on DVD. Launched in February 2013, "House of Cards" was among the first major series to release an entire season at once, a move that fed into viewers desire to devour several see another installment. Many analysts now view "House of Cards" and Netflix's other award-winning series released a few months later — "Orange is the New Black" — as turning points in the company's evolution, similar to the impact "The Sopranos" and "Sex and the City" had for HBO. Netflix CEO Reed Hastings now regularly likens the company to the HBO of the Internet.

Just how many Netflix subscribers have watched "House of Cards" remains a mystery because the company has refused to reveal the viewership of any of its series. But this much is clear: "House of Cards" came along at a pivotal juncture for Netflix.

The Los Gatos, California, company was still recovering from a subscriber backlash triggered in mid-2011 by a dramatic increase in its prices and a bungled attempt to spin off its DVD-by-mail service. Undaunted, Netflix continued to commit billions of dollars to longterm licensing agreements with movie and TV studios while also spending heavily on an international expansion. Some analysts questioned whether the company could survive. Wall Street's doubts have dissipated, and Netflix's service has become an entertainment staple around the world. Since "House of Cards" was released, Netflix's stock has nearly tripled to about $480 while its Internet video service has grown subscribers by 24 million subscribers to 57 million. Half of those gains have come in the U.S.

The momentum emboldened Netflix last year to raise its monthly streaming prices by a $1 to $9. There was little blowback from customers this inations. time. Netflix's widening appeal may have also contributed to HBO's decision to begin selling its channel as a separate Internet service later this year.

While some of Netflix's other original programs, such as "Hemlock Grove" and "BoJack Horseman," have attracted enthusiastic followings, they haven't proven to be a subscriber drawing card like "House of Cards," said Rosenblatt Securities analyst Martin Pyykkonen. "Netflix needs to get to the point where it's showing three or four high-quality shows like 'House of Cards" every quarter if it wants to retain awards so far, and "Orange subscribers," he said.
