DOWNTOWN

Entire Main Street board resigns

BONNIE CULVERHOUSE
bonnie@press-herald.com

Citing an unwillingness by Minden's mayor and city council to change some of the language in the legislation governing its body, five of seven members of the Downtown Development Commission/Minden Main Street resigned during a meeting Tuesday, with a sixth resigning by email and the last one by phone a few hours later.

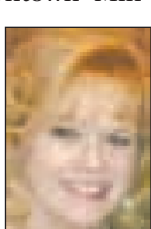

"In an effort to preserve the Main Street program and valuable relationships in downtown Minden, all of the Downtown Development Commissioners resigned from the board," the group released in a blanket statement. "Ultimately, the new legislative language submitted by the mayor and council excludes valuable current members and potential members from eligibility as board members. This gives the city an opportunity to begin with a clean slate and appoint a new Downtown Development board of their choosing."

"We have tried, to no avail, to reach a compromise with the city regarding the legislation that governs our board," commission President Catherine Hunt wrote in her letter of resignation.

Hunt expected to meet Tuesday with Mayor Tommy Davis and Rep. Gene Reynolds, D-Minden, to discuss verbiage describing the commission, the way members are appointed and their duties. Reynolds would then file an amendment to the current law during the upcoming legislative session.

According to the state law, passed in 1990, "The commission shall be composed of seven members, all of whom shall be qualified voters of the city of Minden, and shall have their principal place of business or profession in, or own property in, the Downtown Development District. The seven members shall be appointed by the

Problems arise with M6 bunker, LANG says

*Clogged vent causes

MICHELLE BATES

Col. Ron Stuckey, Louisiana Military Department project coordinator on the M6 cleanup, confirmed Tuesday night one of the bunkers at Camp Minden was compromised.

Stuckey explained roughly two weeks ago, contractors were visiting the site in the quest for competitive quotes. During this visit, in one of the bunkers containing clean burning igniters, they "observed" mold inside.

"Some of the containers were wet," he said. "This is not unusual. To my knowledge, we have at least two magazines (bunkers) stacked to the ceiling, and when it rains, water eventually seeps through and drips in. This is the first time I've seen it (mold) with containers of CBI."

In the technical subcommittee meeting Tuesday, he expounded, saying the reason for the "heavy" condensation was due to a closed vent. In light of the recent weather, with heavy rains and drastic temperatures, one of the vents was stopped up allowing temperatures to rise inside the magazine.

Stuckey said the magazine is constructed with two vents, one on the top and one on the door to allow air flow, and it was the one on top that was clogged.

"It was actually raining inside that magazine," he said, adding the condensation was that heavy. "I've been in all these magazines, and I've never seen this condition before. I didn't know what caused it."

In light of that, he called the U.S. Army which sent in a quality assurance munitions specialist to do an evaluation.

"It's something we do in the Army," Stuckey said. "If we have problems or safety concerns, we call them, and they send somebody in. We coordinated it with the EPA like we were supposed to, and they sent somebody in Monday."

Two Homer men arrested, accused of burglarizing cars

bonnie@press-herald.com

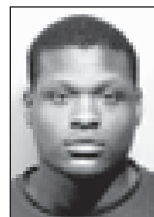

Two days after Minden police arrested a Minden man for burglarizing vehicles, two Homer men were booked on similar charges. Minden Police Chief Steve Cropper says two males fitting the description of two allegedly involved in a vehicle burglary Monday, were spotted by officers at Chateau Normandy Apartments that afternoon. “Capt. Dan Weaver, Capt. Marvin Garrett, Det. Chris Cheatham and Officer First Class Clint Smith interviewed the subjects who said they were visiting a friend at the apartments,” Cropper said. “But officers knew that was where the burglary was supposed to have taken place that morning.” When Rodriguez Q. Porter and Mark Anthony Shavers were arrested, officers reportedly located a small bag of suspected marijuana, along with a plastic Ziploc bag containing $18 in quarters. “The person who reported the burglary said a plastic bag containing quarters was taken,” Cropper said. “When questioned, the men admitted to the vehicle burglary.”

Also recovered was a bottle containing prescription pills that was reported missing from the vehicle. Porter, 21 and Shavers, 17 were booked at Bayou Dorcheat Correctional Center on charges of simple burglary. Shavers is also charged with possession of marijuana.

CHURCH

“This has all been refinished,” longtime member Jean Thomas said, as she pointed to the pine wood that covers the walls and ceiling of the building. “It was a big job. We have new light fixtures and we added stained glass windows.”

Members also replaced carpet, wiring and added air conditioning. “We spared no expense because it wasn’t our money,” Thomas said. “We were blessed to have a couple of people in our church that could afford to this.” Now, the church with a lengthy history has something it’s never had before – a new Sunday school building and a new pair of pastors.

“Our people are really proud of our church,” Pastor Ben Booth said. “All of our members give what they can.”

Booth and his wife, Theresa are new to the community, and their copastorate is something church members have never experienced.

“We came here nine months ago,” Booth said. “It was set up by God for us to be here.”

Booth, a juvenile officer with the Claiborne Parish Sheriff’s Office, was invited to Yellow Pine to speak to a Sunday school class concerning prison ministry.

“They (class) were doing a study, and Theresa, who is also an ordained minister, was preaching at my church that day,” he said. “So I decided to just stay and worship with them. The pastor resigned a short time later, and God kept putting us together and it worked out.”

Theresa Booth was the first woman minister to preach at Yellow Pine. Members called Booth to fill the pulpit as a guest minister, but he had a prior commitment.

“They asked about my wife, and I handed her the phone,” Booth said. “She preached two weeks.”

They are now the first pastoral team at Yellow Pine.

“God called us into ministry 12 years ago,” Booth said. “I’ve got 24 years with the sheriff’s office. God’s used a lot of what I’ve seen and taught, and He’s put me in a position to help people.”

Thomas says she prayed for a minister who would preach to her from the Bible.

“I’ll get over whatever else is wrong with him, if he’ll get up there and preach to me from the Bible where I can understand it,” she said. “I’m old fashioned. This church is not for everybody, but it is for me and people like me. I love it. It is a warm, sweet spirit.”

Booth preaches – from the Bible – and teaches an adult Bible study, while Theresa handles programs for women, youth and children.

“Our job is to help create a Christ-centered community,” Theresa said.

Attendance averages around 40 each Sunday.

A new Sunday school building – something Yellow Pine has never had – was finished in December 2013.

“We used to try and have Sunday school in the church itself,” Thomas said. “But that was very inconvenient. We wanted to grow, and we felt like we couldn’t. We didn’t have anything to offer the young couples with children. We old people could huddle up ‘til we died.”

The new building has several Sunday school classrooms, a nursery and a large kitchen/dining/fellowship hall area known as Faith Café.

Bonnie Culverhouse/Press-Herald

It took roughly a year to build, not because of funding but because of National Historic Register specifications.

“All the buildings had to match,” Thomas said. “Even the storage building had to look like the others.”

Opening night of Yellow Pine’s first Vacation Bible School last summer had 25 children in attendance with an average of 20 each night.

“Closing night, we had 70 people, including parents and grandparents that came to see,” Theresa Booth said.

As the church grows, a camera already installed in the sanctuary, will feed to a screen in Faith Café for overflow congregants.

Yellow Pine Community was once a bustling town of 2,000 people, set up by the railroad and lumber companies. The community and the church have experienced ups and downs over the years.

“It was a community church set up where residents would come and worship,” Booth said. “This church has been a part of this community for so long. As pastors, we want to fulfill God’s calling on this church.”

we have something this nice,” Thomas said of the new building. “A lot of our members are like me – they’ve just always worked and didn’t have much. Now, we feel like we have a future and something to offer others.”

M6

Sam Coleman, dialogue committee member with the EPA, says the issue is not as serious as first believed.

“We did have some concerns,” he said. “But after we talked to them this afternoon, they’re going to be writing a report, and they promised to expedite that report with recommendations. It looks like the situation is not nearly as serious as we thought it was; they did continue to say that the whole situation at Camp Minden is one that we have to be concerned about.”

Coleman says Stuckey took action to deal with the immediate concerns, and members of the Explosives Safety Board who visited the site Monday felt Stuckey’s actions were sufficient.

Stuckey said since the state has taken ownership of the propellant, they have found two bunkers that are leaking, with this one located in the L2 storage area being the one he called the Army about.

Fleming to conduct town hall meeting on M6

bonnie@press-herald.com

U.S. Congressman John Fleming wants to meet with residents who are concerned about the disposal of M6 at Camp Minden.

Fleming, a Republican from Minden, has set a Camp Minden Town Hall meeting for 6:30 p.m. Thursday, March 12 at Minden High School, where he hopes citizens will share their ideas about the issues that concern them most.

In February, during a tour of Camp Minden, Fleming saw for the first time what Louisiana State Police discovered when they investigated an October 2012 blast – millions of pounds of M6 propellant left by Expro Systems Inc.

Fleming says he is aware of the open tray burn technique of propellant disposal requested by the Environmental Protection Agency, but he also knows the community questions the safety of that issue.

PERSPECTIVE

A tale of two states

THERE ARE TWO states of Louisiana right now.

One Louisiana is the private sector economy. This state is on the verge of sustainable growth not seen in generations. As I travel the state to visit with LABI's business members, most of them are optimistic that Louisiana is growing in the right direction and that the future is bright. The state has billions of dollars in new projects, a record number of private sector employees and we expect to reach 2 million non-farm workers for the first time in history this year. Louisiana is projected to average an increase in 75,000 jobs per year for the next decade, with a third of those positions being new jobs we have not had before in Louisiana. We lead the nation in export and manufacturing growth and our GDP is at historic levels. Sure, Louisiana has its challenges like any other economy, but the people of this state are benefiting from the opportunity that comes with an improving private sector economy.

The "other" Louisiana is the state government. This Louisiana will dominate the headlines for the next few months as the Legislature puts together a state budget during the fiscal session that begins on April 13. This state budget is roughly $9 billion higher than just a decade ago and the current deficit will require some smart, strategic and tough decisions to balance everything out.

Fixed costs in the budget continue to place an increasing strain on state government. For example, state pension costs to fund the current system have increased 80 percent over the last decade and teacher pension costs over that same period have increased 124 percent. Collectively, these escalations contribute to just under $2 billion in annual costs, not including the payments made to Louisiana's Unfunded Accrued Liability (UAL) for previous retirement debt. These escalating costs hit our educational institutions especially hard and will continue to do so until we reform Louisiana's legacy retirement system like the private sector and other states have already done. This is only one example of the perennial fixed costs in the state budget that weaken the effectiveness of ever taxpayer dollar.

Some argue the easy choice is to throw sand in the gears of the private sector economy in order to lubricate the cogs of government. They say we have no choice but to sacrifice one Louisiana for the other. They question why the private sector is growing when state government needs more money. Some argue the size of government should drive the state of economic growth in Louisiana as compared to economic growth driving the size, role and focus of government. The truth is, we can have our cake and eat it too.

We don't have to jeopardize one Louisiana for the other, but it requires us to think differently than we have in the past to do so. For example, instead of repealing the inventory tax credit to invest $375 million in higher education, a better path is repealing the tax itself to invest $465 million in higher education. This approach would put more dollars in our classrooms and send a clear signal to the job creators around the country that Louisiana is a great state to place their inventory, workforce and capital investment. Implementing this viable option would require working responsibly with local government to construct a new path forward for them to grow in accordance with today's economy.

In addition to this approach for freeing up additional dollars for higher education, we should also begin giving increased autonomy and accountability to our schools to let them compete in the market. We spend a great deal of time hiring well-credentialed, capable leaders to run our systems and campuses, and then immediately tie their hands the second they start working here. This has to stop.

We need to give these innovators the necessary tools to controls their own costs, overhead, and revenue in return for accountability measures to protect the taxpayer.

Accountability should focus on reigning in outdated programs and departments that don't prepare our students for today's economy; improved retention and articulation efforts that are common denominators found in high-performing systems across the country; reducing the bureaucracy and overlap that occurs with a multi-layered system like we have; and better encouraging our kids to enter campuses and programs that best match their skillsets and high-demand jobs.

In the past, we have typically viewed state budget challenges as an excuse to burden an ever-evolving private sector in order to fund the rarely evolving form of state government. Let's try a different approach this time.

Let's focus not only on how many dollars we invest in higher education, but how we allocate them, what tools we give them to succeed and the results in which they should be held accountable. Instead of just dropping new taxes on our residents and job creators, let's examine ways we can reduce the costs to state government and eliminate outdated taxes that stifle economic growth and saddle state coffers with costs. Instead of viewing the guardrails of our populist past as the only path going forward, let's identify the options available to us due to the rapidly-changing global economy and design a new approach to government that is more effective and economically viable.

We can walk and chew gum. We can have our cake and eat it too. We don't have to rob Peter to pay Paul. We can produce a state budget that is efficient, effective and funds priorities appropriately without sacrificing the growth we are seeing in the private sector. Our two states can finally become one Louisiana, if we decide to make it our mission this time around.

The GOP gang of supremes go after Obamacare

LOOK OUT — the Supreme Court's black-robed gang of far-right ideologues are rampaging again! The five-man clan is firing potshots at Obamacare — and their political recklessness endangers justice, the Court's own integrity, and the health of millions of innocent bystanders.

In an attempt to override the law, these so-called "justices" have jumped on a wagonload of legalistic BS named King v. Burwell. But that case is a very rickety legal vehicle. It sprang from a frivolous lawsuit concocted in 2010 by a right-wing front group funded by such self-serving oligarchs as the Koch brothers, Big Oil, Big Tobacco and Big Pharma. The chairman of the front group was neither delicate nor discrete in describing the purpose of the lawsuit as a raw political assault on Obamacare: "This bastard has to be killed as a matter of political hygiene," he howled at the time. "I do not care how this is done, whether it's dismembered, whether we drive a stake through its heart ... I don't care who does it, whether it's some court some place or the United States Congress."

JIM HIGHTOWER

So much for the intellectual depth of the King case, which was fabricated on a twisted interpretation of only four words in the 906-page health care law. The plaintiffs claim that the law prohibits insurance subsidies to the millions of low and middle-income Americans living in the 36 states that did not set up a state exchange — thus making health care unaffordable to millions of hard-working Americans and small business who are purchasing insurance on the federal exchange, essentially, nullifying the heart of Obamacare.

Both the district and appeals courts rejected that perverse ideological Tommyrot, and even the nation's largest health care provider called the claim "absurd." Nonetheless, the gang of Supremes grabbed the case as a chance to wreak their own brand of ideological havoc on a law they personally dislike.

By taking over this case, these Republican judges have openly become partisans, thrusting the Supreme Court itself into the forefront of the GOP's war against Obamacare — and against Obama himself.

While we know that an anti-government group funded by plutocratic corporate powers is behind the lawsuit intended to terminate Obamacare — who are the four people who are out front as the actual plaintiffs in the case?

The Competitive Enterprise Institute is the corporate front, but it had no standing to sue, so it had to find some actual people who would claim they've been harmed by the health care law. Thus, David King, a 64-year-old Vietnam vet, was recruited to be the lead plaintiff in King v. Burwell, which is now in the Supreme Court's hands. He and three co-plaintiffs were chosen to put sympathetic human faces on what essentially is a right-wing political ploy.

But who are they? An investigative article in Mother Jones magazine by Stephanie Mencimer reveals that King's modest income as a self-employed limo driver exempts him from Obamacare's insurance mandate — so he's done no harm by the law and, therefore, has no standing to sue. Moreover, as a veteran, he's entitled to VA care and, in a few months, to Medicare, making him double-covered by public health programs. Mr. King's main reason for being on CEI's lawsuit appears to be that he loathes Obama, referring to him as "a joke" and "the idiot in the White House."

None of the three other recruits seem to have been harmed by Obamacare, either. "I don't know how I got on this case," says Brenda Levy, adding that, "I don't like the idea of throwing people off their health insurance." Then there's Rose Luck, whose low income also exempts her from the law's mandates. But she, too, fiercely loathes Obama. She posted on her Facebook page that she "wouldn't admit he was our president," calling him "The anti-Christ" who only won the Oval Office because "he got his Muslim people to vote for him."

This lawsuit was a fraud from the get-go — and if five Supremes use it to take away the health coverage of some 10 million Americans, they'll also be exposed as rank political hatchetmen masquerading as "justices."

NANCY'S KITCHEN

Chocolate chip cookies for one

In October 2009, you may recall I had a recipe called "Five Minute Chocolate Mug Cake."

It was for anyone that had a craving for a chocolate cake but did not want to bake a whole cake.

Now I have a KEEPER recipe for a person that is longing for a chocolate chip cookie but does not want to make a whole batch of cookies.

What a coincidence that my granddaughter, Cassie Rohrer and daughter, Lori Raspberry recently emailed me this recipe for a single cookie. It only requires a handful of basic ingredients, a mug and (once "baked" in the microwave) a spoon for diggin' in. Best of all there is no messy cleanup.

If you are like me and chocolate chips cookies are not a favorite, any flavor chips can be used.

One Single Microwave Cookie

- 1 Tbsp. unsalted butter
- 1 Tbsp. white sugar
- 1 Tbsp. light or dark brown sugar, firmly packed
- ½ tsp. vanilla extract
- Pinch (1/8 tsp.) salt
- 1 egg yolk
- ¼ cup flour
- 1 or 2 Tbsp. chocolate chips (or any flavor chips))

Microwave butter in a mug until melted (30 seconds). Using a spoon, mix in sugars, vanilla extract, and salt; beat until well combined. Beat in egg yolk until no trace of the yolk is visible. Mix in flour. Fold in chocolate chips. Microwave on high for 40 seconds or a minimum of 50 seconds. It may not appear to be completely cooked on top but it will be fully cooked through to the bottom.

SUGGESTION: Indulge and enjoy yourself by serving warm with a scoop of vanilla ice cream on top.

Revis picks Jets, money over Patriots

Two years after an ugly divorce, the New York Jets and Darrelle Revis are together again with what a source said Tuesday is a five-year, $70 million deal.

The Jets pulled off one of the biggest moves of the still-young offseason, stealing the All-Pro corner away from the New England Patriots, his agents announced.

Revis celebrated the move on Twitter.

The blockbuster deal came five hours after Revis became a free agent. The Patriots declined to exercise a $20 million option for 2015, but they had retained exclusive negotiating rights until 4 p.m. ET.

It was a stunning blow to the Patriots, who lost their most accomplished defensive player -- a vital cog in their Super Bowl championship.

Many figured Revis had found a permanent home in New England and wouldn't want to change teams for the third straight season, but he was lured back to New York by Woody Johnson's money.

The deal will pay him $48 million in the first three years, including $39 million in full guarantees, a source said. The first two years are guaranteed -- $16 million and $17 million, respectively. In 2017, $6 million of his $17 million salary is guaranteed.

NFL

Rams send Bradford to Eagles for Foles

The St. Louis Rams and Philadelphia Eagles have swapped starting quarterbacks on Tuesday, the first day of the NFL's new league year.

Nick Foles, who emerged as the Eagles' starter in 2013, goes to the Rams in exchange for Sam Bradford, the No. 1 overall pick in the 2010 NFL draft. Trade talks were first reported by ESPN NFL Insider Adam Schefter.

In addition to Foles, the Rams will also get Philadelphia's fourth-round pick in 2015 and second-round pick in 2016. The Eagles will get St. Louis' fifth-round pick in 2015 in addition to Bradford.

The Eagles can also pick up a conditional pick in 2016 based on how many snaps Bradford takes. If Bradford plays less than 50 percent the Eagles will get a 4th-round pick, if he does not play at all it becomes a 3rd-rounder. If Bradford plays more than 50 percent of snaps the Eagles will not receive any additional compensation.

Bradford, 27, missed the entire 2014 season after tearing his left ACL for the second straight season. Foles, 26, missed the second half of the season after breaking his collarbone in a Week 9 game against Houston.

In the 18 games Foles started for coach Chip Kelly, his record was 14-4.

Foles surpassed Michael Vick as Philadelphia's starter by throwing 27 touchdown passes and just two interceptions in 2013. Foles went to the Pro Bowl after the 2013 season and was named offensive MVP of the game.

Playing behind an injury-riddled offensive line in 2014, Foles' numbers weren't as eye-popping. He threw 13 touchdowns and 10 interceptions. But Foles' record in his eight starts was 6-2.

ALL-DISTRICT TIDERS

Minden places seven on all-district basketball teams

BLAKE BRANCH
blake@press-herald.com

The Minden Crimson Tide and Lady Tiders both had an up-and-down season in terms of the win-loss column.

There were times when the two teams struggled and times when they couldn't be beat, but through it all a handful of players shined despite the outcome, and for their efforts they have been named to the district 1-4A all-district basketball team.

Boys

Four Crimson Tiders were chosen to represent Minden on the all-district team: Kevin Hamilton, Anfernee Red, L'Jarius Sneed and Jay Beene.

Kevin Hamilton was the lone Crimson Tider to make the first team list.

Hamilton, a senior guard, was the Tide's go to option for a big bucket when they needed it. The senior with the smooth shooting stroke was tough to contain during district play, averaging an outstanding 22 points per game.

"He was a great scorer and one of the best shooters I have ever coached," raved Crimson Tide head coach Alan Shaw.

Anfernee Red was chosen to the second team after a dominating season on the inside that saw him average 13.6 points and 7.2 rebounds per game.

"Red has great touch around the basket," Shaw said. "He led the team in rebounding the past three seasons."

On the honorable mention list were L'Jarius Sneed and Jay Beene.

Sneed did a bit of everything for the Tide, averaging 10 points, 5 rebounds and 4 assists per game.

"He's a great defender," Shaw said of Sneed. "As the season progressed he also became our floor leader and did a tremendous job."

Beene, a senior, was able to score 7 points per game to go with 7 rebounds per game.

"Jay always played way bigger than his size," Shaw said. "He was a team player that gave us his all every night."

Girls

The Minden Lady Tiders placed three players on the all-district team: Tiaga Pugh, Sha'Terra Batton and Marlena Hill.

On the second team were junior forward Tiaga Pugh and freshman guard Sha'Terra Batton.

Pugh was a scoring force in the paint, averaging 15.7 points and 8.6 rebounds per game.

Sha'Terra Batton averaged 17.6 points to go with 5.6 boards and 3.3 steals in just her freshman season.

Making honorable mention was Marlena Hill who average 12.7 points and 12.2 rebounds a night.

"Each one of these players contributed tremendously to the success of our team," Lady Tider head coach Jacob Brown said. "I thought as the season went on these girls complemented each other very well. There's a lot of upside for these young ladies as they continue to grow as players."

Jimmy Graham traded to Seahawks

The New Orleans Saints and Seattle Seahawks have agreed to a trade sending Pro Bowl tight end Jimmy Graham and a fourth-round draft pick to Seattle for center Max Unger and the 31st pick in the 2015 draft, the teams announced.

The trade is pending passed physicals by both players.

Graham, 28, is regarded as one of the best pass-catching tight ends in the NFL, a player who often lines up as a wide receiver. He has 4,752 receiving yards and 51 touchdowns since entering the NFL as a third-round pick in 2010. In his five seasons with the Saints, Graham had more receptions, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns than any other tight end in team history.

"We would like to thank Jimmy for all that he has done for our organization for the last five seasons," Saints general manager Mickey Loomis said in a statement. "He became a very productive tight end with our team. We wish Jimmy the best of luck in the future. We also want to welcome Max to our team. Max has been an instrumental Pro Bowl player with Seattle since being drafted in 2009 in the second round. In addition, with the first round draft pick, we will have the opportunity to impact our team for years to come."

Saints quarterback Drew Brees was taken aback by the move, telling the NFL Network: "I'm as shocked as everyone else. I love the guy."

According to ESPN's Stats & Information, Seahawks tight ends combined for 48 receptions in the 2014 season, sixth-fewest in the NFL. Quarterback Russell Wilson didn't target his tight ends once in the Super Bowl loss to the New England Patriots. It was the first time in his career that he didn't target a tight end in a game.

"We are thrilled to have an opportunity to acquire a player of Jimmy Graham's caliber, and will remain relentless in our pursuit of sustaining that championship culture," Seahawks GM John Schneider said in a statement.

New Orleans coach Sean Payton and Loomis had made it clear that they didn't plan to sit idly by after a disappointing 7-9 season in which the Saints underachieved on both sides of the ball -- Graham included.

Graham caught 85 passes for 889 yards and 10 touchdowns last season but was less effective than ever as a down-field threat, averaging a career-low 10.5 yards per reception.

"Coming to us from a primary basketball background with limited experience in 2010, Jimmy immediately got to work in the weight room, on the practice field and in the playbook and quickly evolved into one of the top tight ends that I have ever coached," Payton said. "Decisions like these are always difficult and we wish Jimmy the best of luck. We're excited to add Max to our offensive line. He is a tough, physical player where he blocked for one of the top rushing offenses in the NFL, he has been a solid contributor to Seattle's success."

‘Bachelor’ looks forward to seeing a movie with his fiancée

NEW YORK — So you've found love on reality television that ended with a proposal. Now what?

Well, if you're the star of ABC's "The Bachelor," Chris Soules, you just want to go to the movies.

"I keep telling (fiancée) Whitney Bischoff I want to go see 'American Sniper' with her," Soules said in an interview. "I've been waiting. I just want to go somewhere besides (being) locked down in a house or on a television show."

Soules popped the question last November, but the couple had to keep their relationship a secret until Monday's finale.

It wasn't as difficult for Soules, 33, to keep who he picked to himself. He's a farmer from a small town in Iowa and admittedly is "not around a lot of people."

Bischoff, 29, is a fertility nurse in Chicago and wanted to share her news. She kept herself busy to bide the time.

"When we got home literally the next business day I hit the ground running," she said. "It was important to me because there was that sense of normalcy I wanted to have back, and it was very clear very quickly that this was not going to be normal so it was hard."

Life for the couple won't be exactly ho-hum just yet.

Soules has joined the cast of the new season of "Dancing with the Stars," which premieres Monday. He's partnered with pro dancer Witney Carson, who won last season's mirror ball trophy with actor Alfonso Ribeiro.

Soules said he wouldn't take the opportunity without Bischoff's blessing.

"If she's on board it's an opportunity of a lifetime, and it sounds like a lot of fun," he said.

Fans of the "Bachelor" franchise don't have to wait long for another installment. The next season of "The Bachelorette" begins airing on ABC in May, but with a twist.

Kaitlyn Bristowe and Britt Nilsson, who each competed for Soules' affection on "The Bachelor," will appear on the first episode to meet a group of eligible men. Those guys will then decide who goes forward as the Bachelorette.

Fox's ‘Empire’ sets growth standard

NEW YORK (AP) — For the eighth straight time, Fox's music business soap "Empire" pulled in more viewers than it had the previous week, an unusual standard of success that appears to be unprecedented in the modern television era.

The series' ninth episode reached 14.3 million viewers, second only to AMC's "The Walking Dead" as the most popular drama on television last week. Since the "Empire" premiere in January before 9.9 million people, the series has increased its audience every single week, the Nielsen company said.

A typical new program sees a drop in viewers between its first and second weeks, since a premiere will draw in the curious. Increasing its audience for eight straight weeks is extraordinary, and Fox's research could turn up no other series that has grown for that long since Nielsen began using people meters to measure viewership more than two decades ago.

Among Fox's target audience of viewers aged 18-to-49 years old, the "Empire" audience grows by some 40 percent when time-delayed viewing is taken into account.

That's the good news for Fox. Less welcome is the widening gulf in popularity between television's two biggest music competition shows, "American Idol" and "The Voice."

Two episodes of NBC's "The Voice" averaged 15.1

million viewers last week, a full six million more than Fox's aging champ "Idol." In the four years the two shows have aired at the same time, that's the biggest advantage "The Voice" has ever had in a week when both shows aired two episodes, according to Nielsen.

CBS' new spinoff series, "CSI: Cyber," had 10.5 million viewers for its premiere last week, landing just outside of Nielsen's top 10. ABC's "American Crime" had a promising start, with more viewers for its debut than any other show on the network besides "Modern Family" and "Scandal."

"The Big Bang Theory" was the week's most popular show, with its 18.2 million viewers its largest audience of the season, Nielsen said.

CBS won the week in prime-time, averaging 8.6 million viewers. NBC had 7 million viewers, ABC had 6.2 million, Fox had 4.8 million, Univision had 3 million, Telemundo had

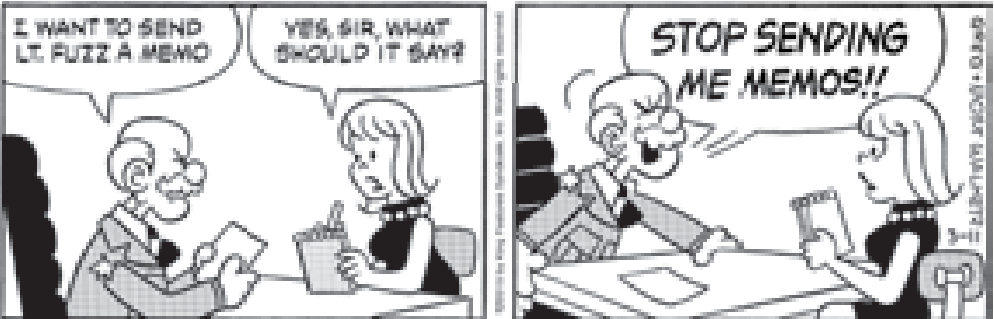

1.2 million, ION Television had 1.1 million and the CW had 1 million.

Fox News Channel was the week's most popular cable network for the first time this year, averaging 1.88 million viewers in prime time. TBS had 1.82 million, USA had 1.79 million, AMC had 1.78 million and the Disney Channel had 1.77 million.
