Police arrest 2 on drug charges

A Minden woman, who claims she has no source of income, was arrested recently by police when drugs were discovered in her vehicle and a large amount of money in her purse.

Minden Police Chief Steve Cropper says Jessie Gill, 41, of the 200 block of Camp Street, and Ross Woods Jr., 48, of the 100 block of Sterling, were charged with open container and possession of marijuana after K-9 officer Harley "alerted aggressively" while searching the couple's Pontiac Grand Am.

"Their vehicle was on the side of the road on Pine Street near Walter Lyons Road, with Woods standing outside the driver's side door and Gill seated on the pas-

National Guard gets 10 bids to destroy M6 propellant

Disposal methods of bids not released

STAFF REPORTS

The Louisiana Army National Guard says it has received 10 bids to destroy 7,500 tons of M6 artillery propellant at Camp Minden.

In an email Thursday, Col. Pete Schneider, LANG spokesperson says the following companies submitted written competitive quotes:

- Leidos
- Aegis Environ UXO, Inc.
- Timberline Environmental
- Clean Harbors Environmental
- General Dynamics Ordnance & Tactical Systems
- Archtech, Inc.
- Kemron Environmental Services
- Expal
- Explosive Services International and
- CH2M Hill

Schneider said Thursday that the guard isn't releasing any details about their bids regarding which technology was proposed in each.

"In accordance with the contract office, we're not going to release actual technologies that each one of the vendors bid on," he said, "because once the committee is formed, they're going to sit down and evaluate all those technologies. And some of them may not fit into the actual ones the dialogue committee came up with or the EPA came up with."

He says an evaluation team is being formed, and the guard will identify agencies and people on the team. It will include two members of the "dialogue committee" formed to evaluate processes after protests by area residents got the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to say methods other than open burning could be considered. Those members are Wilma Subra, scientist and owner of Subra Company, and Dr. Slawomir Lomnicki, of LSU Superfund Research Center and Department of Environmental Services. He says Subra will participate in the actual evaluation of the contracts.

Last year, EPA said burning in shallow trays was the only method that could be used quickly enough to destroy the propellant before it became dangerously explosive.

It said Wednesday that the guard may consider other methods.

In an interview Thursday, Schneider says he does not know if any of the bids contain open tray burn, but when they (LANG) went out for bids, they asked companies to bid on alternate methods.

"When (Maj.) Gen. (Glenn) Curtis appeared at the meeting up there (at Camp Minden in January), he said at the same time this committee was getting together, we went out for proposals for bids from companies to submit an alternative form of destruction," he said.

AFTERNOON BLAZE DESTROYS HOME

A vacant mobile home at 915 Homer Road was totally destroyed in a structure fire Thursday afternoon, which was likely caused by a child playing with a cigarette lighter.

Minden Fire Chief Kip Mourad says the 7-year-old male child admitted to starting the fire after a family member told Mourad the child had confessed.

"He's scared to death, but he said he had a little blue or green lighter," Mourad said. "And he admitted to it."

Mourad says the fire started in the living room.

"They had the electricity shut off, so I don't think anybody was living there, but there is furniture in it," the chief said.

The fire and the child's claims are still under investigation.

Wet weather delays annual Tartan Festival

BONNIE CULVERHOUSE
 bonnie@press-herald.com

What may be one of the area's most popular festivals has been rescheduled, due to recent rains and uncooperative weather.

The annual Scottish Tartan Festival was to return Saturday, March 28 for its 14th year at Scotland Farms, and while the location remains the same, the date has been changed to Saturday, April 18.

Dr. Alan Cameron, host of the annual Scottish Tartan Festival, says this is the first time weather prior to the event has dictated a change.

"Everything is so wet, and we've got more rain coming in this weekend," Cameron said. "This is the worst it's ever been on our place – we've just had so much rain."

Cameron's property, Scotland Farms of Louisiana, is located north of Minden off Highway 79 at Athens Road. The local veterinarian is known as the one responsible for bringing the first Scottish Highland cattle to Louisiana more than 15 years ago.

Cameron and his wife, Sharon received the Lee Wolfgang Promotional and Educational Award at the annual membership meeting of the Heartland Highland Cattle Association at Branson Towers Hotel in Branson, Missouri recently, in relation to the festival and the 80-member association.

"Lee Wolfgang had a meeting here (Minden) many years ago, when we didn't have many members in the association," Cameron said.

Cameron says the group enjoyed the location so much, they wanted to conduct another meeting here.

"Tartan Day was coming up, and the Scottish Society had a picnic every year, so we decided to have it all on the same day with the Heartland Cattle people and the Scottish Society picnic," he said. "I thought, 'I will just get it all over with at one time and I'll be through with it.'"

Little did he know, he was far from finished.

"That's how the festival got its start," he said. "Every year it's gotten bigger and bigger."

The event includes hayrides, a fishing tournament for children, demonstrations of Scottish cattle herding, Highland games, bagpipe music, booths and more.

Cameron has been an active member of HHCA since 1998 and has been instrumental in promoting and educating people about the Highland Cattle Breed.

Police: Undercover crack cocaine buys led to arrest

bonnie@press-herald.com

For several months Louisiana State Police narcotics officers have had an eye on two Minden men allegedly dealing crack cocaine out of their residences.

Narcotics Supervisor Sgt. Jason Parker says LSP initiated an investigation on Tyrone Kennon, of the 500 block of Joel Street and Dominick Jackson, of the 300 block of Mason Alley in November 2014.

"Controlled purchases of crack cocaine were made out of each house," Parker said. "So we had arrest warrants for them selling out of their houses."

Multiple law enforcement agencies led by LSP with Minden police hit the two houses early Thursday, arresting Kennon and Jackson on five warrants each of distribution of crack cocaine.

"We found in the Mason Alley house a small amount of marijuana," Parker said. "We didn't locate any drug evidence in the Joel Street residence but, all combined, we found about $7,000 in U.S. currency that was seized."

The two men were taken into custody on distribution charges around 6 a.m. Thursday, Minden Police Chief Steve Cropper said.

Kennon has an added charge of possession of marijuana.

Cropper says both houses were hit simultaneously.

"State police SWAT did one, and our SRT (Special Response Team) did the other one," he said. "The other agencies and officers were there for perimeter – to make sure the two teams were safe doing their jobs."

Parker says Jackson and Kennon were well known by local law enforcement, as well as LSP.

"When we do this, we love to cooperate and communicate with the local agencies," Parker said. "These two – Kennon and Jackson – were on the Minden Police Department's radar as top-level drug dealers in the area. It was an overall effort on everybody's part to come together and get the job done."

Chamber of commerce pushing sales blast through TRC

michelle@press-herald.com

The Minden-South Webster Chamber of Commerce is in the heat of its sales campaign for the year to fund its various events throughout the year.

"We are in the middle of our Total Resource Campaign," Jerri de Pingre, president and CEO of the chamber, said. "We have five teams that are competing for prizes and bragging rights. What they're doing is selling sponsorships for our events between now and March 31. There are events in 2015 with a few events in 2016."

The sponsorship year runs from April 1 through March 31.

"We really want to encourage the business community to take a look at what these folks have to offer," she said. "It's a fun campaign, but it's also very important, because it gives us our budget for all of our events."

Minden Medical Center is the title sponsor for the TRC, de Pingre says.

At the end of the blitz, the winning team will get a trip on an Amtrak train from Marshall, Texas to Dallas. The trip runs with the theme this year: Rails to Revenue: Get on Board with the Chamber. de Pingre said the good thing is Amtrak has donated the tickets for the trip.

"The teams have to earn a certain dollar amount in sales to qualify for the trip," she said, adding the teams aren't selling sponsorships and memberships for the trip. "They're doing it because they're volunteering for their community."

There are several events throughout the year in which the drive raises funds including the annual chamber banquet and others. New this year will be the first ever First Responders Appreciation Lunch.

It will work much like sponsorships for the chamber banquet, but instead of getting eight tickets for a table, the business will only get two. The idea is for the rest of the table to be filled with first responders.

"We want our businesses to realize how important our first responders are," she said.

That event, sponsored by Town and Country Health and Rehab, is scheduled for Sept. 1.

Other events include the teachers' breakfast and Eggs and Issues where elected officials eat breakfast with the business community.

"We're just trying to connect what's happening in Baton Rouge, city hall and Washington, D.C. with our local businesses," de Pingre said.

Another event this year will allow the business community to contribute to the parish's children and teachers through the Webster Education Endowment Fund. de Pingre explained grants are awarded from the interest earned in the fund. The chamber selects the recipients of the grants.

"We included it in our TRC as a way to try to grow that principle, so that we'll be able to give more grants. The minimum donation is $100. That also helps those businesses that might not be able to donate $1,000, but they can write a check for $200. That's going to grow our fund so we can help more teachers."

Currently, the chamber has received 17 applications but only has enough to grant awards to nine teachers.

In order to sponsor something for the chamber, the business has to be a member.

"That's the whole point of the campaign," she adds. "If you are a team member, you've got connections to people that I don't know. That's kind of the hope – it's relationship driven; people go out to the people in their circles, and it may be people that we've never had the opportunity to interact with before."

For more information, call the chamber office at 377-4240 or email at info@mindenchamber.com.

senger side, when Officer Russell Engi stopped to see if they needed help," Cropper said. "He noticed a strong odor of alcohol coming from Woods, who also had poor balance and slurred speech."

When Gill exited the vehicle, the chief said Engi noticed a strong odor of what he suspected to be marijuana coming from inside the vehicle.

"The officer noticed an open container of gin on the floorboard of the car and removed it," Cropper said. "He was given consent to search the vehicle, but there was so much clutter, he couldn't conduct a good search, but he did notice inside Gill's purse, there were three separate wallets with a large amount of cash. That struck the officer as odd, since Gill told him she is unemployed and is in the process of applying for disability."

Officer First Class Clint Smith and K-9 officer Harley were dispatched to the scene at that point.

"Harley alerted aggressively inside the purse where the cash was located, and Ofc. Smith advised the K-9 alerted in such a manner where he bit down on a part of the wallet that contained money, which could mean that money may have some type of residue from drugs on it," Cropper said. "Then he alerted aggressively again in an area under the glove compartment. A search revealed a man-altered compartment that rotated toward the inside of the vehicle making it easily accessible."

Woods and Gill were taken to the police department where officers conducted a count of the currency.

"The total from the three wallets was $3,408 in different denominations, mostly $100 and $20 bills," the chief said.

The vehicle was impounded pending possible seizure. Woods and Gill were booked at the Minden Police Department where they posted bond.

PERSPECTIVE

Never too early to get snippy

IF THE VERBAL sparring that reared its head over the weekend between gubernatorial candidates Scott Angelle and David Vitter is any indication of more to come, you can rest assured this year's governor's race is going to get nasty.

In some ways, it already has.

A convention of sorts of the Louisiana Oil & Gas Association in Lake Charles was the setting that offered Sen. Vitter, the dean of the state's congressional delegation, an opportunity to create some separation from Angelle, a Public Service Commissioner from Saint Martin Parish, who's made waves of late with some snazzy television commercials aired throughout Acadiana. Angelle's media buys thus far were clearly aimed at reminding our friends and neighbors in Cajun Country that he's one of them. Accent and all.

From most accounts, Angelle's messaging is working though no credible poll has been released to the public to confirm what those of us who follow politics closely are being told privately.

Angelle's movement would explain why Vitter, some seven months prior to the primary election, didn't pass on a chance to point out to the LOGA audience that it is he, as a member of the U.S. Senate, who has a track record of fighting President Obama's overt attempts to strangle the most important industry in Louisiana — oil and gas. The focal point of Vitter's jab at Angelle concerned the moratorium on drilling in the Gulf of Mexico that Obama put in place shortly after the Deepwater Horizon catastrophe. For the lack of a better description, the moratorium brought the oil and gas industry and the thousands of businesses throughout southern Louisiana that depend on it to its knees.

"I just wanted everyone to know I'm not the guy who single-handedly ended the moratorium with a speech at the Cajundome," Vitter said.

Vitter was referring to a rather passionate speech Angelle delivered on the campus of the University of Louisiana-Lafayette not long after Obama put the hammer on drilling in the Gulf. Thousands of Cajuns were in attendance that day to hear what has been described as one of the best speeches any public official has delivered in Louisiana in decades. You can watch it online on YouTube.

As is the case anytime a candidate needles an opponent in a public setting or elsewhere, Angelle, in this case, returned fire, noting Vitter cast one of the deciding votes as a member of the state House of Representatives to raise the threshold that requires a trial by jury in a civil proceeding to $50,000. Big business, including the oil and gas industry, doesn't like it. Plaintiff's attorneys do.

In the meantime, the only Democrat in the governor's thus far, state Rep. John Bel Edwards of Amite, has aired commercials on black radio taking Angelle to task as a clone of the current governor, Bobby Jindal. After all, Angelle worked for the Jindal administration before he was elected to the PSC. He also worked for former Gov. Kathleen Blanco and is a former parish president in Saint Martin. Along the way, he worked in the oil patch.

Yet, it's crystal clear Edwards believes tying Angelle to Jindal, who isn't exactly very popular these days, represents the most effective means to undermine Angelle's candidacy while reminding African-Americans there's only one credible Democrat so far whose name will appear on the ballot this fall when voters pick their next governor.

On the surface, it seems as if Edwards and Vitter are working hand in hand against Angelle. But that's another topic for another day.

Working together or not, it's more than apparent Edwards and Vitter believe Angelle is a contender. If he wasn't, they wouldn't be wasting their time talking about him.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Give Grover Norquist a break

Lately it has become fashionable to belittle Grover Norquist, the American political advocate who opposes tax increases and serves as president of Americans for Tax Reform, in part because Governor Jindal seeks Mr. Norquist's guidance on the subject of state revenue. This criticism, in my estimation, has been overdone.

You may not like Grover Norquist. Fair enough. You're equally entitled to disagree with his anti-tax Pledge. But many of those who criticize Mr. Norquist are missing the larger point. That larger point is simply this: excessive taxes are bad for the economy and bad for America, for several reasons.

First, the money that government spends belongs to us as taxpayers. We may voluntarily (more or less) give a portion to our government in exchange for certain goods and services that we have all agreed government should provide, but in a free and democratic society, the money is still ours because we are the government.

Second, in most cases, the private sector-private citizens and private businesses - can employ capital (money) more efficiently than local, state or the federal government. I don't know about you, but I would buy stock in FedEx before I would buy stock in the United States Postal Service.

Third, excessive taxes discourage work, investment, productivity and economic growth and undermine the quintessential American belief that our future can be better than our present or our past. Clearly, there is some point beyond which higher taxes lead to lower revenues and less prosperity, because people work and invest less.

Fourth, perhaps it wasn't always this way, but today every penny taxpayers give to a legislative body at any level of government will be spent. I'm not suggesting that legislators aren't well intentioned, but a hundred years ago doctors also used to bleed their patients with the best of intentions. The point is that those who believe in limiting the growth of government, as I do, understand that giving too much money to government will inevitably lead to its expansion, in addition to hurting the economy.

For others reasons and a further explanation of these, see Commentary, David Boaz, Feb. 28, 2001, the Cato Institute (a libertarian think tank), www.cato.org.

I don't really know Mr. Norquist. I met him once, and he wouldn't remember me. I remember him, however, because I was impressed with his understanding of why excessive taxes are anathema to the American way of life.

EDITORIAL ROUNDUP

The Times-Picayune: New Orleans on rape kit backlogs

Tommie Lee Andrews was the first U.S. suspect convicted of rape based on DNA evidence. That was in 1987 in Florida. By the 1990s, the collection and use of DNA for forensics was commonplace — including in Louisiana. The technology has been used to solve high-profile cases, including the Green River killings in Washington in 2001.

DNA also is used to rule out suspects who are innocent and to free wrongly convicted people from prison. In Louisiana last fall, Nathan Brown was released after 17 years in prison for an attempted rape in Metairie that DNA proved he didn't commit.

Yet here we are three decades after DNA began being used in investigations, and law enforcement agencies across Louisiana have a backlog of more than 1,300 untested rape evidence kits. About one-third of those date back five years or more. In a small number of cases, the evidence has been sitting around since the late 1980s.

"When I started seeing some of these dates, I was so overwhelmed by how ridiculous it was it took me a day or two to wrap my head around it," New Orleans Sen. J. P. Morrell said. "When you see these dates and the explanations, it's hard to make the case that law enforcement is taking sexual assaults seriously."

Sen. Morrell introduced the legislation last year requiring law enforcement agencies to report how many rape evidence kits they had yet to process. The total in Louisiana is not nearly as high as in some other states.

But Sen. Morrell is right — the backlog of 1,333 rape kits does indicate some departments aren't taking sex crimes as seriously as they should. And the problem is likely worse. Almost 130 agencies so far have failed to report their backlog.

Some law enforcement officials argued that an old untested kit isn't necessarily a sign of anything improper. Evidence wouldn't need to be processed if a case is closed through some other method, for instance. But what if adding that evidence to a nationwide database might clear other unsolved cases?

Law enforcement officials in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Fort Collins, Colorado, used DNA evidence in 2002 to solve a series of rapes and a murder committed by the same person, according to a Justice Department report.

The raw data produced in response to Sen. Morrell's legislation is a good start in defining the status of rape investigations in Louisiana. He and New Orleans Rep. Helena Moreno say they will keep delving, though, to figure out where there are problems. Are some departments indifferent to sexual assault victims? Is there a lack of training in how to use the evidence? Are there gaps in state law? Is there a lack of crime lab resources?

In New Orleans, the Police Department has a history of ignoring sex crime reports. In 2010, the department's sex crimes unit had 800 unprocessed rape kits, some of them from the 1980s. The backlog was cleared, but that didn't solve the problem.

By last fall, the number of untested rape kits was back up to 400. According to a report from Inspector General Ed Quatrevaux's office, several officers in the sex crimes unit essentially ignored 840 of 1,290 sexual assault or child abuse calls assigned to them between 2011-13. They were classified as "miscellaneous" and no report was written. Another 271 cases were designated as sex crimes but the detective assigned to them did no follow-up report, the IG found.

Police Superintendent Michael Harrison put a new commander in charge of the sex crimes unit and removed several officers. He has pledged to make sure there is genuine reform this time. That must happen.

Thankfully, most agencies in this metro area reported few untested rape kits to the state. The Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office and Plaquemines Parish Sheriff's Office had none to process as of Dec. 30. Folsom, Gretna, Harahan, Jean Lafitte and Slidell police also were up to date. St. Bernard and St. John had four each.

The St. Tammany Parish Sheriff's Office reported 61 unprocessed kits — 45 of which were collected a decade or more ago. The office spokesman says that number was submitted in error, though. Testing was not done for many of those evidence kits because cases were no longer open, he said. The department's remaining 13 untested kits are at crime labs waiting to be processed, he said.

Evidence in hundreds of rape cases in Louisiana has gone untested for far longer than a year. That shouldn't continue.

Processing evidence quickly is essential to justice and to keep communities safe. Every law officer should understand that.

Harden drops career-high 50 as Rockets roll past Nuggets

HOUSTON -- Even the biggest stars of the Houston Rockets' past couldn't outshine James Harden on Thursday night.

Harden scored a career-high 50 points with 10 rebounds to lead the Rockets to a 118-108 win over the Denver Nuggets on a night when the team celebrated the 20th anniversary of the franchise's back-to-back NBA titles in 1994 and 1995.

Harden got a boost by knowing players such as Hakeem Olajuwon and Clyde Drexler were watching from the front row.

"That's a special group right there," Harden said. "We're trying to build something special like they did, (and) to play a game in front of them was definitely an honor."

It was the ninth time a Rocket has reached 50 points and the first time since Olajuwon had 51 against the Celtics on Jan. 18, 1996.

Harden eclipsed his previous career best of 46, set in 2013.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Tigers snatch defeat from the jaw of victory

PITTSBURGH — In a season of puzzling losses, this will be a particularly hard one to swallow for the LSU men's basketball team.

Playing like world-beaters in the first half and for the first 10 minutes of the second, the Tigers had N.C. State clearly on the ropes Thursday night in an NCAA tournament second-round game.

But in what was a microcosm of its season, No. 9 seed LSU couldn't finish the job, and No. 8 seed N.C. State delivered in the clutch for a shocking 66-65 victory in the Consol Energy Center.

JONES

With the clock winding down, N.C. State forward BeeJay Anya did what LSU couldn't after it missed six consecutive free throws while failing to find the mark on its last 12 field-goal attempts.

Anya, who had two points to that point, finished the Tigers off on a left-handed hook in the lane with 0.1 seconds left — capping an 18-3 run down the stretch for the Wolfpack and sending its players and coaches onto the court to celebrate.

It was N.C. State's first lead since the 8:42 mark of the first half.

Meanwhile, befuddled LSU players slowly walked to the bench.

"It's heartbreaking just to come to the tournament. ... We were up for most of the game," LSU guard Tim Quarterman said. "We played good. We played as a team. Those final seconds, they made a play and we just didn't end up making enough plays tonight. To lose like that is just a heartbreaker."

Playing in the NCAA tournament for the first time since 2009, LSU (22-11) roared to a 14-point halftime lead and maintained a sizable margin with before N.C. State (21-13) mounted a furious rally in the final nine-plus minutes.

The improbable comeback advanced N.C. State to a third-round matchup Saturday with top-seeded Villanova, which crushed Lafayette 93-52 earlier Thursday night.

The Tigers' last made field goal came at the 10:22 mark, when Jarell Martin scored on a missed shot by Keith Hornsby to increase their lead to 60-48.

After that, Martin twice split a pair of free throws to push the advantage to 62-48 with 9:15 remaining, which seemingly fueled N.C. State's huge run.

"We just weren't able to convert on the offensive end," said Martin, who had 16 points and 11 rebounds. "We did a great job of moving the ball around from side to side, but we just couldn't get the ball to fall in."

Much like its loss to Auburn in the quarterfinals of the Southeastern Conference tournament last Friday, LSU didn't help itself when the Tigers missed free throw after free throw — all in the final 2:59 — while not scoring from the field.

Quarterman, who finished with 17 points, nine rebounds and seven assists, missed the back end of a two-shot opportunity, then missed the front end of a one-and-one with 2:51 left.

Forward Jordan Mickey (12 points, 14 rebounds, six blocks) missed four free throws in a row with 1:25 and 1:03 to play, then misfired on a short jumper with 27 seconds to play with LSU clinging to a 65-64 lead.

After a timeout, N.C. State worked the ball inside, and Anya powered up for the eventual game-winning basket, which bounced high off the left side of the rim and softly dropped through the net.

LSU finished 12-of-22 from the free-throw line.

"Those guys are very capable free-throw shooters; they've been shooting around 70, a little over 70 (percent), most of the year," LSU coach Johnny Jones said. "Unfortunately, stepping up to the line tonight, they didn't go down for them at a crucial part of the game. But they have to understand it's a team game. It was a team effort. They gave a lot of positives in a lot of other areas. ... At the end of the day, it could have been a difference-maker in the game."

Anya also had a key tip-in of a Ralston Turner miss on a 3-point shot with 47 seconds to play that cut LSU's once huge lead down to just one and set up his game-winner.

"I thought N.C. State did an excellent job of making some plays down the stretch," Jones said. "Even right there at the end, making a big play. Unfortunately, we came up short."

"Like Tim said, it definitely was a heartbreaking moment ... very emotional," said Martin, who had 16 points and 11 rebounds. "We weren't ready for our season to end right now."

"We worked real hard and felt like we had a great shot. North Carolina State, they did a great job of executing their plays down in the stretch."

"I'm really excited for them because I thought there were times in that game that I'm sure it didn't look real optimistic for our group," N.C. State coach Mark Gottfried said. "But our guys just kept fighting. They battled all the way to the end. They never gave up; they never got down."

"They kept competing and we ended up with a great play at the end there. BeeJay just made an unbelievable shot."

Bregman homers, top ranked LSU falls to Arkansas 5-1

FAYETTEVILLE, AR - Arkansas pitchers Dominic Taccolini and Zach Jackson combined to limit top-ranked LSU to one run on seven hits Thursday night as the Razorbacks posted a 5-1 win over the Tigers in Game 1 of an SEC series at Baum Stadium.

Arkansas improved to 11-9 overall and 1-3 in the SEC, while LSU dropped to 19-3 overall and 2-2 in league play.

Taccolini (4-2) limited the Tigers to one run on six hits through six innings with one walk and two strikeouts. Jackson earned his first save of the season, blanking LSU over the final three innings and allowing just one hit with four strikeouts.

LSU starter Jared Poche' (5-1) suffered his first loss of the season, as he surrendered five runs on 10 hits in 3.2 innings with two walks and one strike-out.

"Jared is such a gamer and a competitor, but he just didn't have his stuff tonight," said LSU head coach Paul Mainieri. "Arkansas was on him and they swung the bats well, and they ended up getting to him. Jared will be better next week, no doubt."

LSU freshman reliever Austin Bain entered the game in the fourth inning and turned in a superb effort, shutting out Arkansas through 3.1 innings with four strikeouts.

"Bain came in and did a tremendous job and saved our bullpen for the rest of the series," Mainieri said.

LSU scored its only run in sixth when shortstop Alex Bregman launched his sixth homer of the season and his fourth in the Tigers' last six games.

"We weren't great offensively, but we did hit a lot of balls hard that carried into the outfield," Mainieri said. "Arkansas made some tremendous defensive plays, and that happens sometimes in this sport."

Arkansas grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning when designated hitter

Luke Bonfield's groundout scored first baseman Clark Eagan from third base.

The Razorbacks extended the lead to 2-0 in the second on an RBI single by shortstop Michael Bernal.

Arkansas added three runs in the fourth against Poche' on four hits, including RBI singles by second baseman Rick Nomura and by centerfielder Andrew Benintendi.

Eagan finished 3-for-5 on the night for the Razorbacks, scoring two runs.

The teams will play Game 2 of the series at 8 p.m. Friday. Freshman right-hander Alex Lange will start on the mound for LSU, while Arkansas will counter with sophomore right-hander James Teague.

What we learned on day one of the NCAA Tournament

Fourteen is the new 12 this year at the NCAA Tournament.

The heart-pounding first full day of the tournament was headlined by two No. 14 seeds taking down two No. 3 seeds before the day was even half over. Trendy Final Four pick Iowa State lost to UAB, 60-59, and Georgia State edged Baylor, 57-56. Northeastern nearly made it a clean sweep for the three 14s in action on Thursday when it put a scare into Notre Dame before falling 69-65.

Northeastern and UAB had two of the five one-point victories on the day, the most ever for a single day in the tournament and as many as the previous two tournaments combined. Now at least one 14-seed has beaten a 3 in each of the last three tournaments. It was the first time since 1995 that two No. 14s have advanced.

Conventional wisdom when filling out brackets includes always picking a 12 seed to beat a No. 5. It happens practically every year. But this time around, Utah beat Stephen F. Austin and Arkansas beat underdog Wofford to make the No. 5s 2-0 on the day.

There is one more 14 seed waiting to play. Albany will play No. 3 Oklahoma on Friday.

"I'm very surprised," Sooners coach Lon Kruger said of Iowa State and Baylor losing. "Two great teams that had great years and outstanding players. That's the nature of the NCAA Tournament, I guess. It's surprising anytime that happens, but it's happened before."

Here are some of the things we learned on Thursday:

Brackets Busted
The losses by Iowa State and Baylor decimated millions of brackets across the country in a matter of minutes. Just six games into the tournament, only 14,797 of the 11.57 million filled out on ESPN.com were perfect, according to ESPN's metrics. That just 0.12 percent.

Tight Site
Louisville was the place to be on Thursday, with three of the five games that were decided by one point. The Blazers beat Iowa State and No. 11 UCLA nipped No. 6 SMU by identical scores, 60-59, while No. 8 Cincinnati beat No. 9 Purdue, 66-65 in a game that was tied at 59 at the end of regulation.

Texas Tumble
Disappointment is bigger in Texas. All five teams from the state lost on Thursday. Baylor, SMU, Texas Southern, Stephen F. Austin and Texas all made early exits.

Close Call
UCLA prevailed over SMU when Mustangs center Yanick Moreira was called for goaltending on a 3-pointer by Bryce Alford to put the Bruins ahead. The shot appeared to be off line, but officials ruled that Moreira touched the ball before it had a chance to get to the rim. The NCAA's head of officiating said goaltending was the right call.

Vince Neil suing consultant over control of Internet pages

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Rock 'n' roller Vince Neil is taking a fight over his Internet persona to state court in Las Vegas, with a lawsuit accusing a social media consultant of refusing to give him control of his Facebook and LinkedIn accounts.

The consultant, Kristy Sinsara of Bend, Oregon, said Thursday that she believes the lawsuit stems from a misunderstanding.

Sinsara said that in February she gave the Motley Crue lead singer's manager the Facebook passwords and email contact information sought by the civil complaint.

"I don't want to be saying bad things about my client," Sinsara told The Associated Press. "I love and respect Vince. I have evidence that I sent them to his personal manager."

Neil's attorney, James Kohl, declined to comment beyond the civil lawsuit filed March 13 in Clark County District Court.

"Even though Sinsara agreed to relinquish control over the accounts on Dec. 26, 2014, and again on March 1, 2015, she has and continues to maintain control," the complaint said.

It accuses Sinsara of making unauthorized posts that Neil's fans believe to be from him.

Sinsara's lawyer, Isaac Warren of Choctaw, Oklahoma, said he hadn't seen the complaint but also believed it was caused by a misunderstanding.

The lawsuit alleges breach of contract and unjust enrichment. It seeks unspecified damages greater than $20,000, and it asks for an injunction to force Sinsara to turn over access and administrative control of the accounts to Neil.

Motley Crue formed in the early 1980s and is as well known for bad behavior, hard partying and famous girlfriends as hits including "Girls, Girls, Girls" and "Dr. Feelgood."

Neil, 54, also owns tattoo shops and bars in Las Vegas.

Finale of 'Empire' draws 17.6 million viewers

NEW YORK — With a standard-setting finale to its first season reaching 17.6 million viewers, Fox's music business drama "Empire" has proven that it's still possible for broadcast television to create big hits.

That's how many people watched the second of two one-hour episodes on Wednesday night. The first hour was seen by 15.8 million people, the Nielsen company said.

When "Empire" debuted in January, its first-night audience was a healthy but not remarkable 9.9 million. It proceeded to gain viewers for every single succeeding episode through the 12th and final one Wednesday night, a feat Nielsen said is unmatched in two dozen years of estimating viewership through electronic people meters.

On the final episode, music family patriarch Lucious Lyon, played by actor Terrence Howard, learns that he doesn't actually have ALS as he had thought. He also anoints middle son Jamal as the heir to the family business, angering his other sons Andre and Hakeem in the process.

Not since "Grey's Anatomy" in 2005 has a television drama reached so many people for the last episode of its premiere season, Nielsen said.

The viewership estimate doesn't take into account the number of people who will see the show via Internet streams, video on demand and on DVR in the coming days and weeks.

Based on viewership gains seen by past "Empire" episodes, Fox estimates that in a month's time more than 27 million people will have watched Wednesday's last episode.

Facebook said some 4.2 million people accounted for 15.8 million posts, shares and comments on the finale.

The "Empire" success puts the rookie show among CBS' "NCIS" and AMC's "The Walking Dead" in drama popularity this season. It's a boon for Fox, which has seen former juggernaut "American Idol" continue to recede in popularity and few other shows connecting with viewers. It's heartening for television programmers in general to see a program become a hit at a time most new programs fail.

"Empire" will be back for a second season, although Fox hasn't said whether it will be in the fall or winter.
