MELINDA DESLATTE Associated Press

BATON ROUGE -Ignoring the outcry of local government leaders, senators moved ahead Wednesday with the cornerstone of a budget-balancing package of tax changes under negotiation by legislative leaders.

The Senate Finance

Committee voted 9-1 for a proposal by Sen. Robert Adley, R-Benton, to repeal the local property tax charged on inventory. The maneuver would save the state more than $500 million a year that it gives businesses in tax credits to offset the expense.

Business organizations support the tax repeal. But local school boards, sherrely on the property tax money say the repeal could force them to shutter services or raise taxes on residents to fill the gap created by the lost revenue.

Senators on the committee and Adley insisted they would find ways to help offset the lost revenue - and they added to the bill language requiring it. But they said they needed to advance the proposal to keep negotiations moving with the House on solutions for closing a $1.6 billion budget shortfall in the fiscal year that begins

July 1.

"We need to start moving some bills," Adley said. The House Ways and Means Committee wouldn't agree to take politically-tough votes on proposals to raise the cigarette tax or scale back tax break programs until the Senate advanced the inventory

Though the bills were different, both would have prohibited employers from paying women less than men with similar skills and similar positions.

"The facts are that Louisiana is going in the wrong direction," said Julie Schwam Harris, an equal pay advocate.

Republicans argued that the proposals would open a floodgate of lawsuits, penalizing employers who didn't realize they were paying women less. The critics pointed to existing laws protecting employees from intentional pay discrimination.

But Rep. Kenny Cox, a Natchitoches Democrat who sponsored one of the bills, said it's hard to know whether an employer is discriminating on purpose. And besides, he said, whether it's unintentional or not, pay discrimination is nonetheless discrimination.

Rep. Lance Harris, R-Alexandria, said the pay disparity statistics were skewed. The scales could be tipped by men who work in lucrative — and male-dominated — industries like construction and off-shore oil drilling, he said.

"I'm hoping that market forces will remedy this situation," said Harris, a businessman whose endeavors include a fried chicken shack. He questioned whether the state needs a law that he described as onerous for business "when market forces are possibly taking care of this?'

At times the committee debate was heated. Rep. Barbara Norton, D-Shreveport, sponsor of one of the bills, was outraged that Republicans, including several women on the committee, opposed bills like hers.

"We're fighting a battle here that is being fought against women," Norton said. "We, as women, should continue to fight for what is

Then she directed her ire toward men who opposed the bill in the committee, calling it a "disgrace" and a "sad day in America" to have a "man come up here and fight against

That earned a sharp rebuke from Lance Harris, who told Norton that her "tirade" was not appreciated and added that a committee room is not "a pulpit for someone to come up here and disparage members of this body."

Some thoughts and questions

What's the true test of one's commitment to free speech? It does not come when he permits people to be free to say or publish ideas with which he agrees. Not by a long shot. The true test of one's commitment to free speech comes when he permits others to say and publish ideas he deems offensive.

In March, a video surfaced of a racist chant by Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity brothers at the University of Oklahoma, a public university. It has brought widespread condemnation and the fraternity's suspension. Two fraternity students have been expelled. The University of Oklahoma's president, David Boren, said, "To those who have misused their free speech in such a reprehensible way, I have a message for you: You are disgraceful."

The Western world was shocked and outraged by another speech issue that led to the murder of 12 people at the offices of French satirical weekly newspaper Charlie Hebdo in Paris. Islamists were retaliating for what they considered the newspaper's vulgar portrayal of the Prophet Muĥammad, an insult to millions of Muslims.

What's the difference between the actions of the University of Oklahoma administrators and the actions of the Islamist murderers in Paris? Both found the speech in question offensive. Both took actions against the people involved in that speech. So what's the difference? It's a matter of degree, but not kind. Both were unwilling to tolerate speech they didn't like. Of course, the difference in responses is by no means trivial — one being expulsion and the other murder. The principle that applies to one's commitment to free speech also applies to one's commitment to freedom of association. The true test of one's commitment to freedom of association does not come when he permits people to associate in ways he deems acceptable. The true test comes when he permits people to associate — or not to associate — in ways he deems offen-

PERSPECTIVE

Taxation without representation

If there's just one lesson state lawmakers might take away from the legislative session that began last week, that is it's hard to have fun when you don't have any money. It's even tougher when your prospects of putting your hands on some greenbacks are very limited.

Such is life in the fast lane in the Louisiana Legislature in 2015. Or life in a hellhole. Take your pick.

With Gov. Bobby Jindal's threat to veto any legislation that generates a net increase in revenues for the state hanging over their heads, lawmakers have very few options at their disposal to gin up enough money to plug a $1.6-billion revenue shortfall in the state budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1. Either locate the dough to balance the budget or close some colleges and universities and some state hospitals are the choices the Legislature is staring at in the most unlikely of times — an election

We got a glimpse of the difficulties lawmakers are grappling with earlier this week when the Senate Revenue & Fiscal Affairs Committee sat on legislation to repeal the state's inventory tax. How, you might ask, would cutting taxes help lawmakers in their quest to find more money? It's simple. Or maybe it isn't. Beginning in the early 1990s, the state recognized inventory taxes were a detriment to economic development. So lawmakers concocted a program to give the business community some relief without wrecking the finances for local governments throughout

It's a two-fold approach. No. 1, under the plan conceived by the Legislature, businesses are made whole by the state for inventory taxes paid locally. Meanwhile, or No. 2, local governments still get their money from taxing inventory held by businesses in their jurisdictions. The latter represents a lifeline of sorts for local school boards, police juries, sheriffs and the like. Without the money from inventory taxes, local governments would have no choice but to raise taxes - locally - or cut government services.

Accordingly, eliminating the inventory tax altogether would relieve the state of its obligations to reimburse businesses for inventory taxes paid to local governments. At last elimicount, nating inventory tax would save the state more than million annually. course, elimiwould create local governments from one end of Louisiana to the other. More on that point in a moment. It was Sen. Robert Adley's bill to repeal the inventory tax altogether that got shelved Monday in committee. He parked the bill after legislative staff determined the measure wouldn't generate any new revenues for the state in the new fiscal year. That's because inventory taxes paid to local governments are part of the property taxes businesses owe local governments annually. And those payments come a year after businesses are assessed by their local tax asses-

If and when the Legislature figures out how to repeal the inventory tax, local governments will scramble to plug their own budgets, voluntarily or otherwise.

Why "otherwise?"

Because local governments owe money. Often, local governments incur bonded indebtedness to pay for whatever it is that local governments desire to spend money on, such as a new school or a new courthouse or a new jail or streets or whatever. And often, the bonded indebtedness is secured with a dedicated source of revenue such as property taxes, or millages.

So it would be entirely possible for local governments to "roll forward," or increase, millages to satisfy bondholders who must be paid regardless if local governments lost the revenues they previously collected from the inventory tax. In other words, property taxes would rise, and you, Mr. Property Owner, wouldn't have any say in the matter. Better put, there would be no vote of the people to increase property taxes.

It would represent taxation without representation.

That's the little secret no one wants to discuss publicly whenever discussion about repealing the inventory tax arises.

Sure, state government would make off like bandits if the inventory tax went away. But locally, property owners would take it on

And that, my friends, would introduce a whole new meaning to the word "turnover" as it relates to

EDITORIAL ROUND UP

The Advocate, Baton Rouge, on state receiving "Obamacare" funds

Reuters news agency reported that Gov. Bobby Jindal accepted $60 million in federal funds provided under "Obamacare," while a the same time criticizing the health care law every chance he got.

The same is true of several other Republican governors running for president. The Reuters story said Jindal and three other governors eyeing the White House — Scott Walker, of Wisconsin, and Chris Christie, of New Jersey, and now former Gov. Rick Perry, of Texas accepted federal aid from the health care bill, to the tune of at least $352 million.

In fact, as Jindal and LSU health officials pointed out - rightly, we believe — the charge of hypocrisy does not bear scrutiny.

The funding had been coming to Louisiana through federal grants, but in the legislative process in Congress was made part of, or modestly changed, in the Affordable Care Act.

Of Louisiana's funds, some $50 million is related to a nurse family partnership multiyear grant program that has been in place since 1999, said Frank Opelka Jr. chief of staff at the state Department of Health and Hospitals. Nurses go to the homes of pregnant women and those with young children, he said.

Other funding cited in the Reuters report included $1.25 million for a medical school student loan repayment program that rewards physicians who opt to practice in rural settings and five or six public health grants for such things as HIV-AIDS treatment, quitting smoking and epidemiology, Opelka said.

Opelka said the state initially accepted about a $1 million grant to establish a state-based health insurance exchange allowed under the law. "It's something we looked at doing but quickly realized it was not costeffective and gave the money back," he said. The money was returned in March 2011.

This does not seem to us to be hypocrisy but common

If anything, we wish that Jindal had accepted more Affordable Care Act funds, as expansion of Medicaid insurance for the working poor would make Louisiana healthier at a cost heavily subsidized by the U.S. government. Christie to his credit backed that program in New Jersey. Jindal may face some hard questions on the presidential campaign trail about the consequences of his policies in Louisiana. These relatively small federal grants don't rise to the level of an issue in our view.

NANCY'S KITCHEN

Cashew Chicken

In September 2010, I purchased a cookbook from Gloria Martin, Hair

Dresser at Hair Teaser Beauty Shop. It is titled "First You Make a Roux' authored by Patsy Davis Woodcock. It is pages of nugget recipes from Louisiana and Louisiana's Texas neighbor's " T e x - M e x recipes.

One day I decided I would cook this chicken recipe for my sister-inlaw Ava's and my dinner. Although it is an excellent KEEPER, when I chose to prepare it I did not realize how time consuming it could be. However, if you have the time it is well worth the final outcome. To speed up the process I do suggest you have all the vegetables chopped, refrigerated and remaining ingredients premeasured until ready to cook.

I did make a trip to Brookshire's to purchase some of the ingredients. They did not have the snow peas available and although I purchased the mushrooms, I forgot to add them into the skillet. It was still delicious without them and fine with Ava since she is not fond of mushrooms. I halved the recipe because it was only the two of us but if I prepare it again, I will not reduce the amount of ingredients for the sauce.

4-5 chicken breasts (skinned & boned)

4 Tbsp. oil, divided

1 ½ cups chicken broth

½ tsp. ginger
1 Tbsp. brown sugar
2 Tbsp. soy sauce

1 Tbsp. corn starch

1 large onion (sliced) 1 large green pepper (cut in strips)

½ cup green onion and tops (cut 1/2–inch lengths)

2-3 mushrooms (sliced)

1 cup snow peas

1 can water chestnuts (sliced & drained)

1 dash red pepper (optional) ¾ cup cashews Hot cooked rice

Cut chicken into bite-size pieces. In a large hot skillet or wok, add 2 tbsp. of oil and cook chicken until done, approximately 4-5 minutes. Remove from skillet and set aside. In a small bowl, combine broth, ginger, sugar, soy sauce and corn starch; set aside. Add 2 more tbsp. of oil to the skillet and heat. Add onions, bell pepper, green onion and mushrooms, sauté 1-2 minutes. Do not overcook vegetables. They should still have crispness to them. Remove vegetables from skillet and set aside.

Thoroughly stir liquid mixture and add to skillet. Add chicken, snow peas, water chestnuts and red pepper. Cook just until sauce thickens. Add reserved vegetables back to skillet and turn off heat. Add ½ cup cashews. Serve over rice and sprinkle top of each serving with a few cashews.

WIFFLE BALL Tournament to benefit

Minden police The Minden Police

Department is coming together to put on a WiffleBall tournament to benefit their Special Response Team.

"This team trains every week inside the city limits of Minden," Minden Chief of Police Steve Cropper said. "They train in schools, hospitals and any public buildings that allow us to in order to be ready when a situation arises.'

Tournament organizer, Trey Waller, said that the tournament is a way for residents to take care of those who serve and

"This team isn't funded by the city," Waller said. "So they've taken it upon themselves to fund their training. As a taxpayer, I'm pretty excited about my police chief being interested in my safety above and beyond what's being paid for. It speaks volumes about our police force."

The proceeds from the tournament will go towards simulated weapons that are used during training.

The total cost of the weapons is approximately $3,200, and Waller said to raise that total would be a successful tournament.

The tournament will be held Saturday, April 25, from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m, at Living Word's Bush Stadium.

The cost for those who pre-register is $20 and $30 per player the day of the tournament. For a $3 gate fee, spectators are encouraged to bring a lawn chair and come watch some good old-fashioned, backyard base-

Teams can register online at livingwordminden.org (click on the SRT wiffle ball link) or by calling 371-9462 and speaking with Trey Waller.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

Christ's Method of Outreach

As Christians, we are desirous to reach the unreached, and the cities are teaming with them. How do we reach the cities? Following Christ's method is the only way that makes sense. He sent His disciples out with the specific pattern of work He personally used. "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give" Matthew 10:7, 8. His description of ciples was "tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached" Luke 7:22. Preaching was always preceded or accompanied by meeting the physical felt needs of the people – providing healing, food, clothing, etc. Jesus actually spent more time in serving others needs than in preaching. When one's physical needs are met, they are more open to receive help for their spiritual needs.

My husband and I recently had the privilege of being part of 1700 volunteers providing extensive free healthcare from the Alamodome to the underserved of San Antonio. Nearly all medical specialties were represented as well as full dental service, vision, mental health, massage, physical therapy, cooking classes, barber and beauty salon with lovely live Christian music provided by various youth groups. Free wholesome lunches were provided for all those in the Alamodome at mealtime. It was so exciting to experience the sense of unity in working as Jesus would work for the wholeness of each individual. The gratefulness expressed at receiving these free services softened the hearts for a readiness to hear God's word which, along with prayers, were freely offered.

Over the course of 3 days, 6192 people received services. Many were the miracles experienced both in the preparation for this event and during. The physician in charge of vision, by a miracle, was able to get free use of a special retinal camera that can detect problems early enough to prevent blindness. In the first hour we were opened, 3 persons were found with fresh retinal problems requiring immediate surgery. They would have lost their vision had they not come for the

One man, very touched by the compassion he experienced, admitted that he was on his way to kill his brother with whom he was very angry. He was willing to turn over his weapon and asked for prayer. He wanted to be reconciled to his broth-

Oh, so many were the miracles of touched lives. Christ's method is the way – freely meet the felt physical needs in the unselfish love of Jesus and share the good news of what He has done for us and can do in our lives.

ALONG THE WAY

His own work spoken to John's dis-

Living in an upside-down world

Don't you feel sometimes that 'our world is turned upside-down?' I do. Nothing seems to fit like it should. The round peg just won't fit into the square hole of life. The gravy and biscuits don't come evenly matched. "Gimme one more biscuit or another spoon of gravy!" We hate when we ought to be loving. We quarrel when we ought to be friendly; fight when we should be peaceful. We steal when we ought to be sharing. We are bent to do wrong when we ought to be doing right. We see these violations in the daily news.Sinful people should be coming closer to Christ, seeking His righteousness, but instead, the world is spinning farther awayout of control it seems. And the crowd screams with joy as life's roller-coaster picks up speed.

It's like the clown with a weight that always shifts so it is on his head. No matter where it is placed on him, eventually it shifts back to his head. We as disciples feel that way from time to time - misfits in the world. We just don't seem to fit into the groove of what is acceptable by the world's standard. We are a peculiar people! (Titus 2:14; 1 Peter 2:9). To the nonbeliever, Christians are 'odd-balls', out in left field or just a religious nut. Paul was accused of turning the Roman world upside down with his preaching and teaching. (Acts 17:6).

But there are people around us who sense something is wrong with their world, they just don't know how to get it back in order, under God's control. They yearn to live a right-side-up life', but maybe don't know how to begin. * A turning point came in my life when I was a senior in high school.

I spent the night with a friend one Friday night since we were "still playing" in a basketball tournament on Saturday. (The spring waters had flooded the back roads and we could not get through them to go home). As we settled down from the long night of play/travel, my friend's dad said, "Bud, you have the devotional tonight." My friend went to his room, brought back his Bible, opened it and read several verses. He then talked about how the 'Lord had blessed him that day at school and at the game, etc.' He also thanked God for his parents and said a prayer of thanksgiving for me. WOW, was that powerful! I have never forgotten that prayer.

That night, I determined I wanted to be a Christian, I wanted a Christian family and I wanted a home where we could pray freely for the family and the needs of others. That night my world began to make a right turn - "turning up-side down" with a burning desire to get my life straightened out -. with the Lord. It was about a year later (second college semester) that I made a public decision, sharing my declared faith in Jesus to be my Savior. I have never questioned or regretted making that decision. To be sure, my life has been rearranged many times. Each time, some 'old things' are discarded, some new things are added. Many years have passed since that 'happy day when Jesus washed my sins away.' I am not the same person I was then either. Paul writes that we become new creatures....we may look the same - nose, waistline, shoe size, but when Christ comes into our lives, He rearranges everything that is foreign to His nature. He eliminates the bad, ugly and sinful; He then replaces it with that which in good, pure, wholesome and Chris-like! (2 Cor. 5:17).

Of course, it takes a lifetime to perfect some of us. When one is raw and rusty, it takes a lot of spiritual soap to come clean. What we begin to see is that "believers are not people turned up-side down"....we are simply God's redeemed people (right side up) living in a world that is turned 'inside-out, upsidedown and spinning out of control'. Don't you feel like sometimes yelling: "Help, stop this world...I want to get off...NOW?"

If you are in need of prayer, we can help you.

THE UPWARD LOOK

The snares of death

HUTTO

"The cords of death encompassed me, And the torrents of ungodliness terrified me. The cords of Sheol surrounded me; The snares of death confronted me. In my distress I called upon the Lord." Psalm 18:4-6a NASB

David reflects on the times in his life when death seemed to be so close to overwhelming him. The cords of death had encompassed and entangled around him. They were like ropes coiling and wrapping him in its snares and traps where there seemed to be no escape from death. The ungodly and evil around him tormented and terrified him causing him to shiver in terror. He felt trapped with no way to escape but by death ending his life. In his distress his only hope was to call upon God to deliver him.

Lord Jesus, at times troubles and death seem to be snaring me in its traps. I am thankful that I can find help and strength to face this day in You my God.

When The Worst Actually Happens

It is generally good advice to not take our fears and anxieties too seriously. What we fear the most usually doesn't happen and thus we've worried and fretted for nothing. Moreover, the worry and fretting isn't usually very productive unless it leads to constructive action. But, what should you do when the worst actually happens, when the job loss you feared actually happens, or the test results are positive, meaning you have the disease or condition you feared the most? When this occurs, it helps to have a strong faith and a good support network. I saw this in action recently when the school where I taught closed its doors. We had very little advance notice that this was going to happen, and so the last week was spent in trying to wrap things up in the best way possible, for students, teachers and staff. There were a lot of tears, some gnashing of teeth and other emotional outbursts, but mostly people expressing their faith that God would work things out for all of us. Perhaps even more inspiring than the expressions of faith were the many concrete offers of help and support, usually given with a hug or a warm handshake. When the worst actually happens, we have two considerable sources of support, God and our fellow man. Don't be too proud > to ask for help. Christopher Simon

ABC News keeps tight lid on Bruce Jenner interview

NEW YORK — The first on-air promo for Friday's broadcast interview with Bruce Jenner didn't even show his face, an illustration of the line ABC News is walking in trying to drum up interest for the program while saying virtually nothing about it.

The two-hour interview special with the 1976 Olympic decathlon champion and estranged patriarch of television's Kardashian clan is expected to touch on transgenderism and reports that he may be transitioning to a woman.

ABC has released only a couple of non-specific quotes by Jenner and is not expected to reveal much more in advance of Friday's program, preferring to give him the opportunity to address the topic in the full context of the Diane Sawyer has not spoken to outside media about the interview, which was conducted in February - one day in Los Angeles, another in New York. She's scheduled to promote it on ABC properties Friday: "Good Morning America,' ''Live with Kelly and Michael" and "The View." ABC News executives also haven't spoken about it, not even confirming publicly until April 6 that the interview had taken place, until this Friday's airdate

"In producing this special, one of our goals has been to respect Bruce's story," said ABC News spokesman Van Scott. "We want Bruce to speak for Bruce. We've had this top of mind throughout the process from the booking and interviews to the promotion and final product."

The tight lid enables ABC to avoid the touchy issue of potentially "outing" a public figure before the person has had a chance to publicly address the topic himself. Not everyone is waiting: The New York Daily News on wearing a dress. "I respect the way that (ABC has) handled this," said Brad Bessey, executive producer "Entertainment Tonight"

Wednesday published a

son they said was Jenner and "The Insider." ''You have to separate Bruce Jenner and Bruce's story from the media circus that is the Kardashians."

The approach has left his syndicated entertainnewsmagazines starved for news. Bessey said they've done stories on the three 15- or 30-second promos that ABC has released.

The first ABC promo showed two Jenner images - one from behind and the other from the side as he talked with Sawyer, his face obscured by shadows. In the other two Jenner is heard more clearly, and with two soundbites. "My whole life has been getting ready for this," he said. He also talks of the importance of not hurting his ABC's handling of the story so far has been respectful, said Nick Adams, program director of transgender media for GLAAD. The organization that represents gays, lesbians and transgenders has spoken little about Jenner.

"Sharing one's story is something a person should be allowed to do in their own time and in their own increases harmful scrutiny on other transgender people, he said.

The interview was conducted before Jenner was involved in an auto accident in which another motorist was killed. ABC is expected to address the topic, although the timing precludes it from being raised with Jenner.

Some of Jenner's children, pictured in one of the promos, are also expected to be interviewed.

Bessey predicted big Adams said. Media ratings for the special. ABC speculation about a public is airing it on a Friday figure's gender identity night, when TV-watching is usually low. Two big interviews are among the top 100 most-watched telecasts of all time in the U.S.: Oprah Winfrey's 1993 talk with Michael Jackson, seen in 36.6 million homes, and Barbara Walters' 1999 interview with Monica Lewinsky, seen in 33.2 million homes. Friday's interview likely won't approach those numbers, but should certainly exceed the Friday "20/20" average of 6.2 million viewers this season.

"I think people will be watching," Bessey said. "I hope they'll be listening."
