Police Chief Steve Croper says Sgt. Ryan Barnette and Officer Mitch Hackett responded to the call, and when they arrived, a store employee was blocking the exit after observing Brewer putting items into his pockets. "The store employee called the police and indicated what had happened," Cropper said. "When officers went to arrest him he began resisting. They got one handcuff on him and he began to pull away. They finally got him handcuffed and got him to the car." When they got to the patrol unit, Cropper says

This year's graduating class of high school seniors is the first class to do so without a valedictorian and salutatorian.

The Department of Education has done away with the time honored tradition of appointing the coveted titles. Minden High School Principal Robin Tucker says this policy went into effect four years ago and it began with this year's graduating class.

"The people's progression committee of the parish went with what was going on as a state trend to recognize cum laudes instead of valedictorian and salutatorian," she said. "When it was that year's freshman class, this year's seniors, it was that class it started with."

The cum laude system pulls more students into the pool for recognition with their grade point averages. Tucker explained the range of grade point averages in order to qualify.

To qualify for summa cum laude, a student's grade point average must be 3.9 or above, magna cum

Former inmate speaks out on BDCC claims

A former inmate of Bayou Dorcheat Correctional Center is speaking out about the prison he once called home for six years.

Dale Argo, who was released about a year ago, says with all the media coverage of the alleged abuse at the prison, he wanted to share his story and experiences, saying they are not a true picture of life there.

He also defended Warden John Lewis, who he says is a Godly man, a man who cares about every inmate who serves their sentences there. Lewis is affectionately known as "Big John" by many at BDCC.

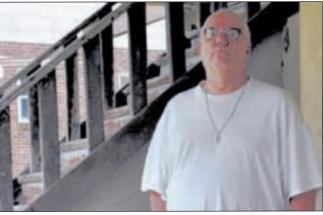

"It's just like any job you go to," he said. "You're going to have days where you're in a good mood and days where you're in a bad mood. Since I was there, I never saw a guard hit anybody. He would not put up with that. I'm not building the man up to be a saint,

I'm just telling you what I've seen."

He didn't deny the video footage he'd seen on the news, but he said he'd never seen anything of that magnitude while he was there.

"I don't know what happened with this deal on TV, but all I can tell you is how (Lewis) has helped me," he said. "From an inmate's point of view, I have never seen anybody pushed around or guards grab

LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE

Budget gets a boost from improved revenue forecast

MELINDA DESLATTE Associated Press

BATON ROUGE — Struggling to close hefty budget shortfalls, lawmakers got an assist Thursday when the state income estimating panel added nearly $179 million to two years of financial forecasts.

Action from the Revenue Estimating Conference was a welcome change for Gov. Bobby Jindal's administration and lawmakers. In the past year, the forecasting panel has made multiple downgrades to financial projections that forced cuts and short-term budget fixes.

"It's finally good news. There's some indications things are getting better in our state," said Senate President John Alario, R-Westwego, a member of the conference. "Unfortunately, it's not quick enough, not fast enough, but at least we're not going backward."

The forecasting panel boosted the state general fund forecast for the budget year that ends June 30 by $99.4 million and for next year by $79.3 million.

"It's a good day, helps us close the gap," said House Speaker Chuck Kleckley, R-Lake Charles, another conference member

Although some of the money was tied to improved expectations for corporate and sales tax collections, a sizable portion of the new money — $74 million comes from a one-time, excess balance in an insurance reserve fund identified by Insurance Commissioner Jim Donelon. Donelon said lawmakers also will need to make a change in state law to spend the money.

The first draw on this year's extra cash is an estimated $56 million for gaps in the state public school financing formula, the TOPS free college tuition program, Medicaid services and reimbursement for local sheriffs who house state prisoners in parish jails. But the remaining money could be used to help close next year's budget shortfall, along with other patchwork funds the conference identified as available for spending.

The House made tax changes that could offset about 70 percent of the list of needs identified by House leaders for next year's budget. That still leaves sizable gaps topping at least $200 million — much in health care programs, but also in state parks, museums and agricultural services.

Without additional dollars, the LSU privatization deals are short of what the hospital operators say they need to continue providing the current level of services to the poor and uninsured who rely on the facilities.

In addition, LSU's medical schools in New Orleans and Shreveport would be left with millions of dollars in insurance and retiree costs from the privatization deals that medical school leaders say could leave them teetering on the edge of bankruptcy.

How lawmakers plan to spend the newly recognized money will become clearer next week, when the House votes on bills to rebalance this year's budget and to set state government spending plans for next year.

The four-member forecasting panel includes Alario, Kleckley, Gov. Bobby Jindal's chief budget adviser Kristy Nichols and independent LSU economist Jim Richards. Changes to the forecast must be unanimous. The adjustments stem from estimates made by economists who work for the Legislature and the governor's administration.

them unless the guard is provoked. When I say provoked, I mean spitting on them or push them or physically threaten them. I can honestly say I have never seen that man even closely condone what they showed on TV."

Tommy O'Rear, an instructor at BDCC who teaches self-help classes like anger management and parenting on Sunday nights, says Lewis is the epitome of what a warden should be. these classes. They have homework and are tested in these courses. If they don't pass the class, they don't get the good time.

Argo says it pains Lewis to see a repeat offender return to prison, saying it actually hurts him. He doesn't get mad, he says.

"You can ask him about any one of these guys out of 400 and something people, and he can tell you something about them," Argo said.

O'Rear says Lewis is strict, but it's not out of brute force, it's out of respect.

As a trustee, Argo worked at the chapel for four of his six year sentence. He says all the services and classes are offered to both the men at BDCC and the women housed on the fourth floor at the Webster Parish Courthouse.

"It's to prepare the inmates for when they get out," O'Rear, who teaches the men's classes, said. "It's to prepare them to get back into life. There are 90 men in these classes, and all these men love the Lord. These inmates are very concerned about their children and grandchildren and they want to be good examples."

Argo and O'Rear talked about the chapel that was built at BDCC, saying it was built totally through the generous hearts of churches and community members. Without Lewis, they say, the chapel would not be a reality. "(The State of) Louisiana or nobody paid for that chapel," Argo said. "That was all donated. Sheriff (Gary) Sexton and Big John should be known for that. You can go to other places and you never see a church. Ms. Kellye (Lewis' wife) and Tommy could be making money, but they go out there for nothing, and why? Because of him (Lewis).

"The best way I can put it is this," he continued. "When you go there, you broke the law. You should be man enough to say I did it, and I'm going to do (my time). You can go to church every day. You can go to classes. He's got a GED program out there now. He's trying to make us, when we walk out of there, be better in the community."

IIIII

He says Webster Parish is fortunate to have a warden like Lewis, because of the programs and services offered at BDCC.

Argo says that while it's still prison, the inmates are treated with respect, and it's a lesson Lewis shares with inmates and guards alike.

"When I tell you that he actually cares about everybody in there, he actually does," Argo said. "He and his wife actually care about what goes on in there. Besides having the classes and gaining the knowledge, they (inmates) get good time for it."

EDITORIAL ROUND UP The Advocate on the state budget "It's a complex process with a lot of moving parts." Wiser words were never spoken by Gov. Bobby Jindal, who viewed with apparent calm a revolt against his budget plans in the state House of Representatives.

Depending on the count, about $600 million to $700 million in reduced tax credits and exemptions, and a small increase in the cigarette tax ($68 million) are part of the House's plans to fill the holes in Jindal's incomplete budget.

Such independence of thought among lawmakers is new, albeit forced on members by the consequences of Jindal's proposed cuts to universities and to health care.

Better to trim back tax credits and exemptions than face a collapse in higher education or fail to open the gleaming new hospital in New Orleans, or other serious consequences of the Jindal budget ...

The moving parts are one issue. The raft of revenue-raisers have to go to the Senate, whose President John Alario, of Westwego, is the acknowledged master of the dark legislative arts. He seeks to reconcile the governor's doctrinaire opposition to most of the House-passed bills with the need for revenue to plug the budget holes.

We do not know if that is possible. Even if it is mathematically possible, the moving parts will require a remarkable level of cooperation among members of the House and Senate, the business lobbyists with such great influence and a governor who is prone to use his veto pen to burnish his anti-tax credentials on the national stage.

Even with the lobbyists swarming, the House votes were a revolt against business as usual. The governor's calm reflects an awareness that he still holds aces in his hand. The problem for the state is that a budget structured along Jindal's original proposal would be a catastrophe for Louisiana communities and our future. It's high stakes and not just a game of cards.

PERSPECTIVE

EDITORIAL ROUND UP American Press on graduation season

In the next few weeks, thousands of Southwest Louisiana students will graduate, moving from high school to college and from college into the so-called real world.

Graduation is a time of celebration — celebration of students' accomplishments, celebration of making it through years of school, and celebration of the beginning of another chapter in young lives.

Graduation isn't so much a certificate as it is recognition of moving from one step in life to another, taking lessons learned and applying them toward a new opportunity.

Graduation may seem like an ending, but it's actually just the beginning. Education doesn't stop after you graduate.

"You're not going to get very far in life based on what you already know," said philanthropist Charlie Munger in a 2007 commencement address at the University of California Law School. "You're going to advance in life by what you're going to learn after you leave here."

Where to from here? The answer to that question is as varied as the students who make up this year's graduating class.

Here's a bit of advice for you that is universal:

Live your life with integrity. Have some kind of vision for your life, even if you don't know the plan.

Accept failure and learn from it. Bequeath to the next generation a world better than the one you were handed.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR Rule of law

To the Editor:

There's a lot of talk in the so called news these days, the subject is with the NFL, the possible deflation of the football. So far no facts discovers, only guessing, trying to stir up more controversy in the already troubled NFL.

Yes, we have rules, our American "Rule of Law," however when our rule of law is not enforced properly, when it's overlooked in many more serious places. Such as, truth in politics, truth and our military, active duty, where is the promise of our US government in supporting our veterans, especially our wounded veterans.

Why is the media so intense, so involved with the NFL, the air pressure in a football? I believe our rule of law works when applied evenly,like our US politics, backing, supporting our law enforcement agencies and of course when applied evenly, apparently in our military. Combat deserters are not honorable, our military has the book on this regulation, let them use it. Our rule of law needs to begin at the top.

Jack L. Daniels

A new study is comforting to some, downright alarming to others. Pew Research, the highly-respected polling outfit, questioned tens of thousands of Americans about their religious faith and affiliation.

The most striking finding: Christianity is in a steep and secular decline, pardon the pun. Only about 70% of Americans now identify themselves as Christians, a drop of 8 percentage points from just seven years ago.

So, where did all those missing Christians go? They have not converted to Judaism, Hinduism, Buddhism, or any other religious "ism." No, they have basically dismissed religion altogether. The biggest increase in the survey was among Americans who describe themselves as atheist, agnostic, or "nothing in particular." Pew researchers characterized the trend as nothing less than "astounding."

That cheering you hear is coming from the left, home to "progressives" who agree with Karl Marx's odious comparison between religion and opium. Marx, whose theories led to more deaths than anyone in human history, added this: "The abolition of religion as the illusory happiness of the people is required for their real happiness."

One slight problem is that Marx was dead wrong, as he was about pretty much everything. Social scientists universally find a powerful correlation between belief in God and worldly contentment.

But when a nation loses its religious bearings, there is something far more important at stake than human happiness. It's illustrated in a famous quote often attributed to the brilliant British writer and thinker G. K. Chesterton, who converted to Roman Catholicism while in his late 40s.

"When men choose not to believe in God," he reportedly said, "they do not believe in nothing ... they become capable of believing in anything."

At the extremes, Chesterton's warning was illustrated by the Nazis, who replaced God with the god of racial purity, and the communists, who worshipped at the altar of radical egalitarianism.

Of course, our own antireligionists are much more benign. They often proclaim their deep faith in environmentalism, wealth redistribution, the welfare state, feminism, or the eternal pursuit of individual gratification.

These trendy causes and movements come and go, but the human need to believe in something - anything - is a constant throughout history. And the greatest, most free, most optimistic nation ever created was founded by men who firmly believed in Judeo-Christian principles.

Scholars debate whether Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, and the others were deeply religious men, and whether the Constitution omitted God for a reason. That may be interesting to academics, but what really matters is that the Founding Fathers formed a nation uniquely based on Christian principles.

The present decline of Christianity is good news to the swells. You know, the Hollywood types who routinely mock the faithful, and the editorial page writers who have never set foot in a church except when taking in the sights on their European vacations.

Let's face it, atheism is kind of chic. Book stores and Kindles feature popular authors who declare that "God is Not Great," and "God is a Delusion." The secular press heaps praise on these books, while the authors are in great demand on the talk show circuit.

But it's an ominous trend to those who believe America has a special and exceptional place among nations. The Judeo-Christian traditions that have been an integral part of America's greatness are withering away. That is not a cause for celebration, but for deep mourning.

John Lennon famously urged us to "imagine no religion," and touted the notion of "all the people living for today." Well, that dream of the secularists is slowly coming true, and millions of Americans are in fact living for today.

It is not a pretty sight to watch religious faith withering before our eyes, being replaced by rank self-gratification. Pardon the expression, but may God help us.

Bill O'Reilly is a talk show host on Fox News. His column runs on Friday in the Minden Press-Herald. And last but not least, thank those who paved the way for you — your parents included. As most graduating students know it takes family support to make it through to graduation. That might include helping with homework, more often includes them cheering in the stands at extracurricular activities and always includes financial support.

We have all heard the saying "it takes a village to raise a child" but we also must understand that good children grow up to be good people and make a village strong. Education is a part of that process, but how you use your education is the key to not only your success, but the success of any good community. We congratulate the class of 2015 and welcome them into our village.

NBA Rockets force game 7

LOS ANGELES (AP) - With a 19-point lead in the second half, the Los Angeles Clippers were cruising toward clinching the franchise's first Western Conference finals berth.

Not so fast. The Houston Rockets would not be denied. Corey Brewer scored 15 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and Houston stunned Los Angeles 119-107 on Thursday night to force a Game 7.

"We kept saying, 'We're not going to quit,'" said Dwight Howard, who had 20 points and 21 rebounds. "We kept believing. We never gave up on each other."

James Harden scored 23 points - making all 11 of his free throws — while spending most of the fourth quarter on the bench for the Rockets, who have won two straight after trailing the series 3-1. Josh Smith scored 14 of his 19 points in the fourth.

87-68, Trailing Houston outscored the Clippers 51-20 over the end of the third and in the fourth to shock the sellout crowd of 19,417 into near silence.

NATIONAL BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION LeBron one step closer to bringing Cavs a title

CHICAGO (AP) -Everything changed for the Cleveland Cavaliers when they found out LeBron James was bringing his talents home from South Beach.

Just like that, they were contenders again. And now, they're headed to the Eastern Čonference finals.

The Cavaliers knocked out the Chicago Bulls 94-73 on Thursday night to clinch their Eastern Conference semifinal series in six games even ready for the next oppothough James struggled to score 15 points and Kyrie Irving limped off the court.

"What a year," Tristan Thompson said. "Fourth year with the Cavaliers. The previous three years we were thinking about the lottery and who we were gonna draft. Now I am playing with this father (LeBron) here. What a ride. I will enjoy this for a day and just get like a good bet to emerge nent."

The Cavaliers went from 33 wins to 53 with "King James" back and trying to do what he couldn't the first time lead them to a championship.

He decided to give it another try after winning two in four years with Miami, and with Kevin Love and Irving alongside him, Cleveland looked from the East. They still furious rally at home in might. But with Love suffering a season-ending injury in the first round and Irving hobbled by two bad legs, the Cavaliers are banged up heading into their series against Atlanta or Washington.

They got all they could handle from the Bulls, right up until this game. A series that saw the two teams trade buzzer-beating victories in Chicago and Cleveland withstand a Game 5, ended with a relative whimper.

Matthew Dellavedova scored 19 points and Tristan Thompson added 13 points and 17 rebounds to help the Cavaliers advance to the conference finals for the first time since 2009 even though their superstar played like a mere mortal and their All-Star point guard hobbled to the locker room in the first half.

"These guys work their tails off every single day when you guys are not around," James said. "Yes, I'm a little bit surprised because of how we've handled the postseason so far. These are first-timers right here (Dellavedova and Thompson) as well as Kyrie and Kev before the injury. They want to be good, they want to be great, and every single day they prepare the right way.'

DAVID LETTERMAN ON RETIREMENT: It's time, but he's torn

NEW YORK — You don't think of David Letterman as a stop-and-smell-the-flowers type, but here he is, at a major turning point yet savoring his chocolate milkshake.

Perched on a stool at a fast-food restaurant beside the Ed Sullivan Theater, where he has hosted "Late Show" for two decades but will do so only a bit longer, Dave unwinds from that day's taping and graciously submits to a reporter's questions while, more than once, he comments on his shake's deliciousness.

He also thinks today's show was excelent, a surprising appraisal from this famously self-critical star.

It was a smash. Cher did a surprise walk-on. Martin Short belted out a comic eulogy to Dave ("It's the end,/ My pretend show-biz friend!"). Norah Jones sang "Don't Know Why" and everyone got misty.

Every moment seemed precious, and for no one more so than the host. During each commercial break, as Paul Shaffer and the CBS Orchestra rocked out, Dave rose from his desk and shed his suit jacket, then, in his shirt sleeves in the shadows, prowled his stage, an august presence silhouetted against the cityscape backdrop as, almost certainly, he pondered how quickly time is running out.

"I wish tonight's show had been the last show," says Letterman, dressed down now in long-sleeve T-shirt, painter's pants and sandals. "Tonight should have been the last show. 'That's it! Good night, every-body!' I don't know what we're gonna do for the next two weeks."

It isn't hard to detect, or understand, the simmering ambivalence in Letterman's decision to take his leave after 33 years in late night and 22 years hosting CBS' "Late Show," on May 20.

But by now he's done it all. Letterman has carved a place in cultural history with his pioneering brand of postmodern silli-ness that collared "Late Night" fans on his arrival in 1982 and subsequently was absorbed into the Age of Irony he played a major role in charting.

He personified a prankish, insubordinate style that mocked the world he inhabited on and off the air. Early in his career, he summed up his mission as 'smart, shrewd observations" about pretty much anything, with their unifying theme imposed by the fact of their airing on TV: "You and I both understand that this is stupid.

He maintained an arch detachment from most everything, in particular the celebrity world most TV hosts cozied up with his dad, mom and sister would observe an American ritual on Sunday nights watching "The Ed Sullivan Show," the CBS variety show that originated for a quarter-century from the very theater he would someday occupy. "After every act, Ed would go, 'C'mon, now, let's really hear it! Come on, everybody!' And my mom would say, 'I hate the way he begs the audience to applaud the performers. You either deserve it or you don't!' And I think that's me: Yeah, they're performers, but there's no reason you should bend over for them."

WHERE IT ALL STARTED

Granted, when "Late Night" began, A-list stars weren't exactly beating down the doors of NBC's Studio 6A to join Dave. Letterman's solution: Find and launch "stars" of his own drawn from his own staff and the world at large.

"I was never quite sure whether a big star would get better ratings than if you had the Potato Chip Lady," he muses. "I never knew. But we ended up having more of the Potato Chip Lady in the first couple of years.'

Such resourcefulness helped put Letterman on the crest of a new wave of comedy that came to be called "found humor" and remains a major part of his legacy, one long ago coined "Lettermanesque."

But don't talk legacy with Dave. He swiftly raises his deflector shield.

The real credit goes to the writers," he insists. "It was their show that I was doing, especially early on. And then I got to a point I knew how to do what they were wanting me to do.

We had guys who had worked at the Harvard Lampoon!" he says, flashing a grin. "I attended university in Muncie, Indiana.

As the end nears, "Late Show" has dug into its vaults to replay a sampling of vintage comedy bits, some almost Dadaesque in their absurdity. (On a recent show, a 1993 clip found Dave cruising Manhattan making mischief with his car phone, as when he alerted a news-radio station that traffic was backed up on Amsterdam Avenue, then corrected him-"Oh, I think it was just a red light.") self:

Those old clips make him nostalgic for the Lettermanesque-ness he may have since outgrown. "I realize what the old show was, and we haven't being doing the old show in years," he says. "And that's all because of me.

But no one stays avant-garde forever, especially after a record-breaking, surely If he was never quite beholden to never-to-be-matched run that exceeds celebrities, a story from his childhood even Johnny Carson's 30 years on "The helps explain. Back in Indianapolis, he Tonight Show." And especially when so and punching the Sheetrock. And then I "I'm gonna be miserable for a long time."

many of the elements that certified Dave as cutting-edge have by now become of the cultural status quo.

'God, it's been 6,000 shows!" he says. "I used to have these conversations with (wife) Regina: 'How much longer can I do this? How much longer do I WANT to do this?' There was a lot of that before the decision, and now it's like, 'Holy crap! We have less than two weeks!'

"It was so much fun tonight, just really fun," he says again, wistful at the notion of a great guest like Short seated next to other hosts when he's not around: "I want to be the guy he tells his stories to.

"I'm really, really torn. I know why I shouldn't be doing it anymore, but these last few months have been soooo easy. No wonder. As the days count down, love for Dave is escalating: "With a simple retirement announcement, every day I'm Salesman of the Month." Letterman's life was anything but easy in October 2009, when an extortion plot compelled him to acknowledge on the air that he had been sexually involved with women on his staff.

He weathered that storm, largely thanks to a candid and contrite accounting to his audience.

"I had one choice: I had to be honest about it," he says. "But it was the worst time of my life. I remember just thinking, 'Oh my God, I've ruined my family,' and that became the only concern. And then: Oh, yeah, you could get fired! You couldn't draw an unlabored breath. 'What is he doing? Is he up there just randomly exploiting women sexually?' That's what people were talking about.

'And it was ME, for God's sakes!"

How about making it somebody else? "There's always Regis!" Letterman laughs. On Dave's crisis meter, the scandal far exceeded his emergency quintuple bypass in January 2000.

"The heart surgery was FUN! It was something new to talk about that was ALL ME! Plus, everybody was worried about me, and doing everything they could. People would come and see me and bring me things. Jane Pauley gave me some pajamas and a pair of slippers. It was delightful, like every day was Christmas.

'And the doctors were wonderful. That was 15 years ago, and when I had my reg-ular test in October they said, 'This is exactly the way it was after the surgery.' Those people – I mean, who does a job that well?"

Another miracle of medical science: An antidepressant he's been taking in recent years.

"It saved my life. I used to wonder how ther people weren't always screaming started this, and I felt like, 'Ahhh, I see!' And now I don't punch Sheetrock and scream as much."

'NO CURE TO BEING 68'

But nothing, no drug or elixir, can turn back the years.

"There's no cure to being 68," he sighs. "The fact that I'm 68 happened." The man who once was an arbiter of hipness feels obliged to acknowledge that "the number of people who are wildly popular on television or music or the Internet that I don't have any knowledge of is endless. I'm constantly going, 'Who is so-and-so? Who LIKES so-and-so?' It's like I'm the drifter who's wandered into town and doesn't know anybody.'

He gazes around at his fellow late-night hosts, "and those other people are so much younger, and so more energetic, than I am. You can make a comparison any night, and that'll be true."

Don't try telling Letterman that what he's done so long - host a show and be funny in inventive new ways - isn't a function of youth, like modern dance or cage fighting. No, Dave has made his decision. May 20 is closing night. And after that? Will he, like Carson who retired at 66 in 1992 and lived another 13 years — simply disappear from public view?

"I don't think there's anything for me to do," Dave replies. "My wife keeps saying, 'Oh, don't worry — you'll get another job if you want it.' By looking through the want ads?! "'68-year-old former talk show host:" Nothing here, honey. Nothing today.'

"I don't know what's gonna happen," he says, beyond more family time with Regina and their 11-year-old son, Harry. "I hope it will all be good. It's my responsibility to make it good. It's not like heart surgery: 'Could I get a little more mor-phine?'"

It's not as if he's glum. More like meditative, addressing the question almost no one can eventually avoid, including many of his most devoted viewers: Where did all the years go?

Meanwhile, he's enjoying his shake and pleased with this day's work.

"If you see how wound up I am," he says, "it's because of the show tonight: Cher, Marty Short, Norah Jones! If the last show goes like that, I'll be like this. I hope the last show goes well, because that's what I will take with me. It will reflect nicely on the body of work."

And if it doesn't go so well? He grins:

LOUISIANA LEGISLATURE Bill giving workers paid sick time spurned by committee

BATON ROUGE — A proposal to give all Louisiana workers paid sick days was rejected by a Senate labor committee Thursday, leading one lawmaker to condemn business groups that opposed the bill for their "hypocrisy."

During the meeting, lobbyists from the Louisiana Association of Business and Industry and the National Federation of Independent Business both said their organizations were opposed to the paid sick leave bill, sponsored by Sen. Karen Peterson, D-New Orleans.

Dawn Starns, Louisiana state director of NFIB, and Renee Amar, with LABI, both said they opposed Peterson's bill because they think it would be burdensome for businesses.

"They might reduce (employee) benefits, they might reduce (employee) hours and they obviously might increase costs to their customer," said Amar.

Sen. Ed Murray interrupted the two and asked if they received paid sick leave — Amar said she thought so, Starns acknowledged she did — leading to a testy exchange.

"The companies you represent are opposed to your own policy," said Murray, D-New Orleans. "The hypocrisy up here never ceases to amaze me.

Talking over each other at times, Murray and Starns traded barbs.

"We have to be the voice for people who are out there in communities," Starns said. "Whatever my company does is not really a fair comparison to what the policy is that y'all are asking to put in at a state level."

invoked the subject of guaranteed equal pay for women, another hot-button issue supported by many Democrats but opposed by business.

"I'm not sure I get equal pay ... I'm opposed to that

That seemed to flabbergast Murray who is sponsoring an equal pay bill and who responded: "You're opposed to being paid equally? I can't believe you just said that."

laude is a 3.7 to a 3.89 and a cum laude is a 3.5 to a 3.69.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Dan Rawls says the reason for phasing it out is so that it wouldn't affect the outgoing classes.

"You may have five kids that are summa cum laude, you may have eight that are magna cum laude and 15 that are cum laude," he said. "Before, you would have a valedictorian and a salutatorian and that's all you would have."

He says he agrees with too," Starns said.

Despite the lively debate, the Senate committee voted the bill down on a 3-1 vote, with committee chairman Sen. A.G. Crowe, R-Slidell, not casting a vote.

Peterson urged lawmakers to approve the bill, which would have allowed employees to accrue one hour of paid sick leave for every forty hours worked, with a 52-hour cap on paid sick time.

While many white-collar workers receive paid sick time, people who prepare food in restaurants, clean hotels or hold other lowwage jobs often don't. As a result, many go to work sick, which can be a public health risk, supporters of Peterson's bill said. Connecticut and Massachusetts have passed paid sick leave laws, they said.

'Everybody gets sick," said Peterson, who estimates 700,000 Louisiana workers don't get sick pay. "People who are not working, they don't have this problem; (this is) for productive people contributing to the economy."
