Reynolds: SAVE bill was 'smoke and mirrors'

Representative says bill does nothing for citizens

MICHELLE BATES
michelle@press-herald.com

The state budget passed in this year's legislative session despite a bill that state Rep. Gene Reynolds calls "smoke and mirrors."

The SAVE bill, which is an educational tax credit, does nothing for citizens who might file for the deduction on their income taxes, he says.

"The one and only purpose was for (Gov.) Bobby Jindal to go here in a few weeks and go on TV and say that he did not raise taxes, which in fact he did," Reynolds said.

"It sets a really bad policy precedent because in future years, future governors can use this to raise taxes to however much they want to."

He explained the Student Assessment for a Valuable Education bill, or SAVE, is a higher education tax credit that is revenue neutral - no money changes hands.

"They came up with this idea that we're going to give each student a $1,600 tax credit," he said. "But we're not going to give it to them. We're going to give it to the Board of Regents. So, the parents never get any tax rebate on anything. The Board of Regents is a tax exempt organization, and they never get any money either, because the money that they were going to get anyway was already in the budget from our funding bill.

"It was a fictitious thing on paper that didn't really

Salvinia spraying to resume Monday

Lake still closed to recreational boaters

MICHELLE BATES
michelle@press-herald.com

Spraying for giant salvinia on Lake Bistineau is expected to resume Monday.

That's according to officials with the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. Jeff Sibley, a biologist and local district manager for inland fisheries, says while Bistineau remains closed due to flooding, spraying for the invasive aquatic weed will resume to stay on schedule.

"The decision to close (Lake Bistineau) came from the police juries," he said of the Bossier and Webster juries.

He says they received permission to go back onto Lake Bistineau to resume the spraying that began in April to kill the salvinia. The work is contracted out, and Sibley says they will follow the no wake rule to account for flooded areas of the lake.

The lake was closed June 7 when water levels began rising.

A Minden man found himself under arrest on drug charges after police discovered residue on his person.

Artie Brown III, 44, of the 400 block of Weston Street, was arrested Tuesday, June 9, and charged on a warrant for theft (third offense), possession of cocaine and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Minden Police Chief Steve Cropper says Capt. Dan Weaver observed Brown walking down Webster Street in Minden.

"Capt. Weaver knew there was an outstanding warrant for his arrest for theft," he said. "At that point in time, he called for backup and Officer Terry Stephens arrived and

WEBSTER PARISH COMMUNITY SERVICES

Changes ahead for community services bus routes

BRUCE FRANKLIN
bruce@press-herald.com

Changes are coming to bus routes provided by the Webster Parish Community Services.

Effective July 1, all trips will be one way, eliminating the former round trip rates.

Executive Director Mary Whitaker says the change will help riders with cost and scheduling.

“The reason for the change is that some passengers only wanted and needed to ride one way. Previously, they had to pay for a round trip, because that was all we offered,” Whitaker said. “The change will also allow riders to have more flexibility in choosing how they want to schedule their rides.” Monthly bus passes will remain at $60 a month and riders who purchase the pass will not be affected by the change Whitaker says.

Trips to the Shreveport area remain unchanged.

Transportation services are provided from 6 a.m. until 6 p.m. Monday thru Friday excluding holidays.

FRIDAY FIRE DAMAGES HOME

Minden Fire Department responded to a house fire in the 1000 block of Clay Street just before 10 a.m. Friday. Fire officials say the fire appears to have started near the rear of the dryer and spread to the attic. Firemen extinguished the fire and used tarps to minimize water damage to the home and its contents. A positive pressure fan was also used to help eliminate smoke from within the residence. WEATHER

Low near Yucatan brewing storms for Texas, Louisiana

MIAMI — The National Hurricane Center says a broad area of low pressure near the Yucatan Peninsula could brew nasty weather along the Texas and Louisiana coasts and inland Monday night and Tuesday.

Hurricane center spokesman Dennis Feltgen says the low may develop into a tropical system.

But he says that whether it does or not, it's likely to slam into the middle and upper Texas coast and west Louisiana with at least 4 to 6 inches of rain and 40-mph winds.

He says that includes parts of Texas that were flooded only weeks ago.

He says people should pay attention to the system whether or not it's given a name.

Feltgen says a hurricane hunter plane checked it Sunday afternoon and another will go Monday morning.

also must not have performed on a record charted in the top 100 country format of Billboard within 18 months preceding the local competition.

A $20 entry fee is required of all acts entering the country showdown produced by participating country music radio stations. To ensure fairness, a uniform judging system will be used on all levels of competition.

The showdown is sponsored in part by the Webster Parish Convention and Visitors Bureau. WPCVB executive director Lynn Dorsey says the showdown is like the competition in Shreveport where Jared Mourad competed for a shot for a spot on The Voice.

“They actually compete locally and then the radio stations sponsor them to go compete nationally,” she said. “According to Kristy Cox (of the famous Grammy award-winning The Cox Family), this is how a lot of stars get to Nashville. We discussed how much talent we have in this area and what a great opportunity this is to get some of our people from our area to get a chance to go to Nashville.”

Designed to find the most promising country music talent in the United States for the past 33 years, the Country Showdown gives aspiring artists a chance to launch their professional careers. Thousands of performers compete annually for the Country Showdown title.

Approximately $200,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded nationwide, including the grand prize of $100,000 cash to the national winner, presented at the national final televised special.

Each spring, hometown talent contestants sponsored by more than 500 local radio stations across the country pave the road for stardom. Local winners advance to over 40 state contests, where the prizes include $1,000 in cash and the opportunity to receive an expense-paid trip to the national final to compete for $100,000 and the coveted national title.

hurt anybody, but it didn't help anybody either,” he continued. “It just set a bad policy precedent. It was a smoke and mirrors game where by which Jindal could say we had tax credits...that were never there really.”

No one ever answered the question if parents would have to file the tax credit on their income taxes either, he said.

The House and the Senate agreed to pass the state's $25 billion budget, plugging a $900 million deficit. The House voted 59-43, of which Reynolds was among those who voted against the budget, and the Senate voted in favor by a vote of 30 to 9.

“I just couldn't make myself vote for smoke and mirrors,” he said. “I just had to draw a line somewhere and say it's a matter of principle.”

Reynolds made it clear while higher education and healthcare was funded at last year's amounts, the budget was cut across the board, and it will hurt several departments, cutting many jobs.

They did raise the cigarette tax and cut back on some of the rebates that have been given for many years, he says.

Reynolds alluded to the fact that a special session could be called in January to begin repairing the budget's structure. The structure of the budget is where the problem lies, he says.

“We've got to change the structure of the budget,” he said. “The structure of the budget is fixed so that your hands are tied, you cannot move money and you cannot prioritize things. Capital outlay is a mess; the whole structure of the budget has got to be changed going forward if we're ever going to get out of this mess that we're in.”

If they don't, he says, the budget is going to have a shortfall of $1.8 billion again. They used “one-time money” again to plug the holes in the budget, and that has to change as well, he says.

2015 FLOOD

Louisiana flooding: 'Dirty red water was too much for some'

NEW ORLEANS — The flooding Red River in rural northwest Louisiana is reaching levels not seen since the 1940s, sending people scrambling to protect their homes, property and livestock.

Along the river on Friday, family, friends, neighbors and volunteers pitched in to build sandbag walls. The effort has been going on for about a week, as the river has swelled from massive rains that hit neighboring Texas and Oklahoma.

The river had receded only an inch since Thursday. That left residents faced with the prospect of continued sandbagging of homes and property. The National Weather Service predicts the river will slowly fall over the next week.

In a new gated community in southeast Shreveport, homeowners said an army of people has showed up to help.

Floodwaters had traveled a half-mile to reach the new homes in the area, called Les Maisons Sur La Rouge subdivision.

"I met my neighbor for the first time as we both worked to save our homes," Jasen Bragg said.

Nearby, in Bossier Parish, officials said two or three dozen houses and about the same number of mobile homes were flooded.

Lt. Bill Davis with the sheriff's office said Friday that he was at the River Bluff subdivision, just north of Bossier City, where 14 of the 24 homes had 3 to 7 feet of water in them. Homes range in price from $500,000 to $1 million, he said.

Davis said many homeowners put up a good fight, but the "dirty red water was too much for some."

Davis said it would be awhile before the water recedes, but that's when the real work starts in cleanup and rebuilding.

Bucky Croach said his 4-foot wall kept his home in Les Maisons Sur La Rouge dry.

"The water came within a few inches from my wall's top," Croach said.

Croach said he was thankful for all the help.

"People brought food, water, pumps and even a generator," he said. "These are people I have never seen before."

Mary McDaniel stood inside a home that her father, Curtis Lofton, was building. She's been using a boat to get to the house.

"My father was a week away from getting this 6,000-square-foot home ready for this weekend's home show," she said.

One of Lofton's workers, Marces Carter, said, "We'll clean up when the water goes down and finish up this house."

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

Stand up for American workers

My top priority as President is to grow the economy and help more hardworking Americans get ahead. And after the worst economic crisis in our lifetimes, our businesses have now created 12.6 million new jobs over the past 63 months.

That's a record streak of job creation. And it's come as we've been working to reform our schools, revitalize manufacturing and the auto industry, revamp our job training programs — and rework our health care system, covering more than 16 million uninsured Americans so far.

We've done all of this to rebuild our economy on a new foundation, a foundation for growth that benefits not only us, but our kids, and their kids. Because we do live in a new economy. And we've got to adapt to make sure America leads the way in this new century, just like we did in the last.

Part of that means sparking new sources of growth and job creation that keep us on the cutting edge. And one big way to do that is through smart new trade agreements that level the playing field for our workers, open new markets for our businesses, and hold other countries to the kinds of high standards that Americans are proud to hold ourselves to here at home.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA

Simply put, America has to write the rules of the 21st century economy in a way that benefits American workers. If we don't, countries like China will write those rules in a way that benefits their workers.

Now, on Friday, Republicans and Democrats in the House of Representatives voted to help the United States negotiate new trade deals that are both free and fair — deals that expand opportunity for our workers and our businesses alike. And that's good. These kinds of trade deals say no to a race for the bottom, for lower wages and working conditions.

They're about starting a race to the top, for higher wages, and better working conditions, stronger environmental protections, and a smarter way to crack down on countries that break the rules of the global economy.

But that's not all we should be doing for our workers. Right now, something called Trade Adjustment Assistance provides vital support, like job-training and community college education, to tens of thousands of American workers each year who were hurt by past trade deals — the kind we're not going to repeat again. Republicans and Democrats in the Senate have voted to renew this initiative, but so far, the House of Representatives has chosen to let it expire in just a few months, leaving as many as 100,000 American workers on their own. For the sake of those workers, their families, and their communities, I urge those Members of Congress who voted against Trade Adjustment Assistance to reconsider, and stand up for American workers.

Because these smart new trade deals aren't just about growing our economy and supporting good new American jobs. This is about the kind of country we want to build for our kids and our grandkids. And if I did not think that smart new trade deals were the right thing to do for working families, I wouldn't be fighting for it.

This is the right thing to do. Trade that's fair and free and smart will grow opportunity for our middle class. It will help us restore the dream we share, and make sure that every American who works hard has a chance to get ahead. That's a cause worth fighting for — today, and every day I have the honor of serving as your President.

AP NEWS ANALYSIS

Frayed relations could lead to significant change

Frustration, even outright anger, with Gov. Bobby Jindal has been simmering in the Louisiana Legislature for years, building as the Republican governor's presidential ambitions grew more obvious.

But widespread legislative sentiment that Jindal has been making decisions based on a GOP presidential campaign he's expected to announce June 24 may have a silver lining for the state, possibly putting limits on the next Louisiana governor's power and forcing sweeping change for state budget and tax policy.

In the just-ended legislative session, senators enacted changes to their leadership selection process aimed at limiting a governor's meddling and increasing legislative independence.

Lawmakers in both the House and Senate agreed to curtail the broad records exemptions granted to the governor, to provide more information to the public.

And the state's financial situation — hamstrung by Jindal's rigid positions on tax discussions — has become so troubled that the next governor elected this fall will almost certainly hold a special session to allow the type of wide-ranging, needed debate on the budget and taxes that lawmakers haven't had for years.

More through tradition than constitutional authority, Louisiana's governor has wielded significant power and sway over the business of the independently elected legislative branch. The governor's ability to veto line items in the budget, control which construction projects secure state financing and appoint hundreds to state boards and commissions has regularly been used to keep lawmakers in line — and to limit what should be a separation of powers.

Lawmakers have allowed governors to choose their leaders and anoint committee chairmen. Jindal, term-limited and unable to run for re-election, has used that tradition and power to his advantage, just like his predecessors.

But the increasing rockiness of the relationship between lawmakers and Jindal may have set the stage for some notable shifts when a new governor takes office in January.

A day before the legislative session ended last week, the Senate enacted changes to the way it chooses its president and president pro tempore (the chamber's second-ranking job) every four years. They agreed to a secret ballot.

With that change, senators say a governor's arm-twisting and threats can't carry as much sway in the votes because the governor won't be able to find out how individual senators voted — and won't be able to retaliate.

"The things that prevent us from being independent I think could be alleviated with a secret ballot," said Sen. Eric LaFleur, D-Ville Platte, who sponsored the rule change.

As they urged passage, senators talked of the heavy hand of governors in legislative decisions. Sen. Jonathan Perry, R-Kaplan, called the rule change "the most important vote for the future of this body."

"It's easy to say you're a senator, you're independent. We all know that practically right now that ain't possible," said Sen. Norby Chabert, R-Houma.

In the last days of their work, lawmakers also gave final passage to a proposal that would limit the secrecy of the governor's office, to lessen the sweeping records exemptions that keep most information in the office hidden from the public.

Whether Jindal will agree to the record changes remains unclear. But lawmakers tried to make it an easy decision for him, setting the start date to coincide with the next governor's term. The bill wouldn't impact Jindal at all.

The more wide-ranging implication of the fractured relationships between lawmakers and Jindal could be tied to finances.

As Jindal guarded his record against tax increases, lawmakers went along with the governor's push to use piecemeal financing to patch their way through the budget each year.

With savings accounts drained and continued budget problems on the horizon, lawmakers and the four major candidates for governor have started conversations about a wholesale review of Louisiana's tax structure and its billions of dollars in tax breaks.

A special session on the issue is expected when a new governor takes office, in the hopes of putting the state on a more solid financial footing.

Whether Louisiana gains improvements from the legislative discontent with Jindal is up to how the state's next governor and future lawmakers use the opportunities presented to them.

Melinda Deslatte covers the Louisiana Capitol for The Associated Press.

PERSPECTIVE

Federal lands don't belong to the states

The federal government owns large chunks of the West. It owns 65 percent of Utah, 69 percent of Alaska and 83 percent of Nevada. Some Westerners see unfairness in that. They should not.

Sen. Lisa Murkowski of Alaska recently slipped an item into a non-binding budget resolution, calling on the federal government to dispose of all its land other than the national parks and monuments. That would put U.S. national forests and wildlife refuges — from the Arctic to the Everglades — up for grabs. The Senate narrowly passed it.

Three years ago, Utah's Republican governor, Gary Herbert, demanded that the federal government turn millions of its acres over to his state. Just like that.

Thing is, the land is not Utah's to take. Federal lands do have an owner, the people of the United States. Those acres belong as much to residents of New Jersey and Ohio as they do to the folks in Salt Lake City.

Has anyone asked you whether you want to give away federal land? Me, neither.

Some insist that the laws creating the Western states required the federal government to hand over much of the land it retained. Not so, says University of Utah law professor Robert Keiter.

On the contrary. The Utah Enabling Act stated that the inhabitants of the proposed state had to "forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within the boundaries thereof." That sounds pretty straightforward.

The property clause of the U.S. Constitution and subsequent Supreme Court cases hold that the U.S. keeps public lands in trust for all Americans. The government may keep, sell or give away the land — as well as decide what may be done on it.

Even if the federal government were obligated to unload that land, Keiter writes, "that obligation does not require the federal government to give land to the states."

Sales of federally owned land should go to the highest bidder, with the proceeds dropped in the U.S. Treasury. If the state of Utah cares to participate in the auction, good luck to it.

In reality, the federal government has, over the years, disposed of some millions of its acres — some sold, some given to homesteaders, some handed to the states.

Western states didn't care about this mostly parched land until the feds started building huge irrigation projects in the 1920s. Many states, including Utah, actually refused offers of public lands because they didn't want to lose federal reclamation funds, mineral revenue and highway money.

Federal ownership does have its advantages. About 330 million acres of federal lands are used for grazing cattle and sheep. Ranchers last year paid only $18.5 million in fees to use that land, whereas the feds appropriated $144 million for the grazing programs, according to a Center for Biological Diversity study.

"Had the federal government charged the average private forage market rate for non-irrigated lands in the western states," the study says, "grazing receipts would have been on average $261 million, greatly exceeding annual appropriations."

The oil and gas industries operating on public lands currently enjoy discounted royalty rates, courtesy of the U.S. taxpayer. We really ought to be charging them market rates.

Ronald Reagan famously said of the Panama Canal, "We built it. We paid for it. It's ours."

How did the federal government originally obtain title to the Western lands? Through treaties with France, Britain and Mexico.

So American taxpayers did indeed pay for that land and made it more fruitful. That's why it's ours, all of ours.

Scherzer strikes out 16 in win

MILWAUKEE --

The way Max Scherzer was pitching, the Milwaukee Brewers were going to need a bit of luck to get anyone on base.

They got it -- barely. Scherzer struck out a Nationals-record 16 and threw a one-hitter, losing his perfect-game bid on Carlos Gomez's broken-bat, bloop single in the seventh inning as Washington beat the Brewers 4-0 Sunday.

"I was able to execute every pitch for the most part where I wanted to," Scherzer said.

Gomez opened the seventh with a looper to shallow right field that just fell inches beyond the outstretched glove of second baseman Anthony Rendon. Gomez said he "got lucky" to get that hit off Scherzer.

"I wouldn't imagine that that's going to be the last opportunity that he's going to have to do something special," Nationals manager Matt Williams said.

Cost of Stanley Cup tickets soars

Just getting into the United Center to potentially watch the Chicago Blackhawks win their first Stanley Cup on home ice since 1938 could cost more than $1,000.

And that's not even for a seat.

Less than an hour after the Blackhawks won Game 5 over the Tampa Bay Lightning in Tampa on Saturday night, the resale price on StubHub for a standing room only seat in Chicago for Monday night's Game 6 was north of $1,000.

Those numbers have held through Sunday. As of 9 a.m. ET on Sunday, the cheapest ticket that comes with a seat for Game 6 of the Stanley Cup finals was $1,979.

Standing room only seats have a face value of $140. Upper goal section seats, that have a single-game face value of $285, are listed on StubHub for $2,445 each. Club level center tickets that have a face value of $650 are listed for $4,816 each, and the cheapest tickets right up against the glass, with a face value of $1,200, are listed at more than $10,000 apiece.

"Aside from when the Bears were in the Super Bowl against the Colts, these are numbers that are reminiscent of the Michael Jordan days," said Max Waisvisz, partner in Chicago-based brokerage Gold Coast Tickets.

"There are people calling who have never spent a dollar on hockey in Chicago and they just want to be there," Waisvisz said. "That's what really drives the price up."

COLLEGE WORLD SERIES

LSU falls to TCU, 10-3

OMAHA, Neb. -- TCU broke a scoreless tie with two unearned runs lead in the fourth inning then used the momentum to put the Tigers in the College World Series loser's bracket with a pair of four-run frames on Sunday afternoon, 10-3, at TD Ameritrade Park Omaha.

LSU (53-11), which committed a season-high four errors, will face the loser of Vanderbilt versus Cal State Fullerton on Tuesday at 2 p.m. CT on ESPN2.

Vanderbilt and Cal State Fullerton were suspended due to severe weather with the Titans leading 3-0 in the bottom of the sixth inning. The game is set to resume at 11 a.m. CT Monday on ESPN2.

TCU (50-13) will take on the winner of the Commodores and Titans in the winner's bracket at 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

"It's amazing, I've been in this game for a long time, and sometimes you see things you haven't seen all year, or for years," said LSU coach Paul Mainieri. "We just had a couple of missed plays there, and they got clutch hits, and things just kind of spiraled out of control for us."

"So, what we're going to do is regroup. We have a practice day tomorrow. We'll get ready to play again on Tuesday, whoever we play, whether it's Vanderbilt of Fullerton. We'll regain our composure and our poise and confidence, most importantly, and get ready to play on Tuesday. We know we're a much better team than what we demonstrated today."

In the bottom of the third, the Tigers looked to get an early lead when Jared Foster singled to left, stole second and tried to score on a single to shallow center field by Jake Fraley. However, Foster was thrown out at home plate on a perfect throw from TCU centerfielder Cody Jones and a block of home plate by catcher Evan Skoug.

After retiring the first nine Horned Frogs he faced, LSU starter Jared Poche' (9-2) put himself in a jam in the fourth by committing two throwing errors. Both runs came around to score on singles by Connor Wanhanen and Dane Steinhagen to give TCU a 2-0 lead.

The Tigers fought back with a run in the bottom of the fourth. Alex Bregman and Kade Scivicque each singled to start the inning, and both advanced on a groundout by Conner Hale. Bregman scored on another groundout by Andrew Stevenson to cut the deficit to 2-1.

In the fifth, Poche' loaded the bases with a pair of walks and a single. With the infield in, Hale was unable to handle a hard grounder at third base and TCU's third run scored.

Poche' hit the next batter with the bases loaded and was lifted after giving up a two-run single to Wanhanen. TCU led 6-1.

The Horned Frogs added four more runs on four hits in the top of the seventh off three Tigers relievers to push the advantage to 10-1.

Meanwhile, after giving up five hits in the first three innings, TCU starter Preston Morrison (12-3) kept the Tigers off balance, sitting down 12 straight batters from the fourth through seventh innings before leaving the game with a nine-run lead.

With one out in the eighth inning, Foster broke a streak of 13 outs with a solo home run to left field off TCU reliever Brian Howard. With two outs, the Tigers manufactured another run when Fraley walked, moved to second on an infield single by Bregman, and to third on a wild pitch. A single by Scivicque plated Fraley, but Hale grounded out to the pitcher to end the threat. The Tigers used a CWS record-tying eight pitchers in the contest. The start of the game was delayed 31 minutes due to lightning in the area.

NBA FINALS

LeBron not enough for surging Warriors

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — LeBron James soaked his tired feet in an ice bath, had ice wrapped around both knees and his back as he sat smiling in Cleveland's locker room after a second straight loss in the NBA Finals.

While the Cavaliers' chances at winning it all are dwindling, James' confidence is not.

"I feel confident because I'm the best player in the world," he said. "It's that simple."

It just hasn't been enough for a depleted Cavaliers team against the much deeper Golden State Warriors.

James had 40 points, 14 rebounds and 11 assists in the second highest scoring triple-double in finals history but the Cavaliers lost 104-91 to the Warriors on Sunday night to fall behind 3-2 in the series.

James had more points, rebounds or assists than anybody on either team. He played center, point guard and everywhere in between. The only thing James couldn't quite do was will the Cleveland Cavaliers to a victory in Game 5 of the NBA Finals.

Despite the stellar night, James said he could still do more, citing a couple of offensive rebounds he allowed, some blown defensive assignments and turnovers.

"I don't put a ceiling on what I'm capable of doing," he said. "I know I'm shouldering a lot of the burden, but it is what it is."

James is now running out of time to find enough help to lead Cleveland to its first major sports title in 51 years. Game 6 will be Tuesday night in Cleveland with the series set to return to Oakland on Friday if a seventh game is needed.

"We've got enough to win it," James said. "We protect home we come here. We'll worry about Tuesday first. But if we protect home like we're capable of doing, we force a Game 7."

With All-Stars Kyrie Irving and Kevin Love and fellow starter Anderson Varejao sidelined by injuries, James has been a one-man band this series. He is averaging 36.6 points, 12.4 rebounds and 8.8 assists through five games. He had 39 points in a triple-double in a Game 2 win and backed that up with another brilliant performance Sunday.

Only Jerry West in 1969 has scored more points in a triple-double in finals history with 42. West was also the only member of a losing team to win finals MVP, a club that James might soon join the way this series is headed.

"LeBron has been tremendous is even an understatement for how he's played in the series," coach David Blatt said. "He had another one of those days today. Under the current set of circumstances, that's what we've got to get, and he's bringing it. You don't see that every day, what he's doing."

James' night could be summed up in one stretch of the fourth quarter. James gave the Cavs their last lead of the game with a long 3-pointer that made it 80-79 with 7:47 to go.

But MVP Stephen Curry answered with an even longer 3 for the 20th lead change of the game and Klay Thompson followed a miss by James with another 3 that put the Warriors up by five with a lead they would never relinquish.

James got some early help from J.R. Smith, who hit four 3-pointers in the first half before turning cold once again and making no baskets in the final 33 minutes.

"We kept going to him," James said. "He just missed some shots. He came out aggressive, which we wanted him to do. We kept finding him. He started off well, he just cooled down. It's just a make or miss league."

Tristan Thompson provided a lift in the second half but Game 4 star Timofey Mozgov was limited to less than 10 minutes as both teams went to small lineups and no one else stepped up.

Mozgov's absence helped Golden State win the rebounding battle, including five offensive rebounds in the fourth quarter.

"It's definitely deflating to our defense," Thompson said. "They take some tough shots that you don't see too often, so we've got to find our man, box him out."

At one point, James scored or assisted on 17 straight baskets made by Cleveland in a stretch of 22:35 that started early in the first quarter and went all the way past halftime. Many of those baskets came when James was playing center as both Thompson and Mozgov sat.

Matthew Dellavedova made the only two baskets up to that point that James wasn't involved in but didn't hit another all game.

'Jurassic World' bites off biggest global bow of all time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dinosaurs are anything but extinct at the box office.

"Jurassic World," the fourth film in the series, became the highest global opener of all time with a staggering $511.8 million in its first days in theaters.

It also devoured a number of domestic box office records with a $204.6 million take, according to Rentrak estimated on Sunday.

In addition to setting a record for 2015, "Jurassic World" is now the second-highest domestic opening of all time, right behind "Marvel's The Avengers" which took in $207.4 million in 2012. By the time Monday actuals roll in, there is a chance the film could dethrone "Avengers."

It's been 14 years since there has been a new "Jurassic" film in theaters, and the combination of cinematic grandeur, nostalgia and awareness helped "Jurassic World" far surpass analyst predictions going into the weekend, which had the film on track for a $125 million opening.

"This over performed in a way that I've never seen," Rentrak's Senior Media Analyst Paul Dergarabedian said. "It broke the box office sound barrier."

Universal Pictures and Legendary co-financed the $150 million, PG-13 rated film. Audiences in every quadrant turned out to see the film in theaters. According to exit polls, 39 percent were under the age of 25, signifying the massive interest of both a new generation and the continued enthusiasm of those who saw "Jurassic Park" in 1993.

Also, audiences shelled out the extra money to see the film in the biggest format possible. Approximately 48 percent of domestic audiences opted for 3D.

"It is extraordinary. The film has resonated with audiences around the Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Rentrak. Final domestic figures will be released Monday.

1. "Jurassic World," $204.6 million.
2. "Spy," $16 million.
3. "San Andreas," $11 million.

4. "Insidious Chapter 3," $7.3 million.
5. "Pitch Perfect 2," $6 million.
6. "Entourage," $4.3 million.
7. "Mad Max: Fury Road," $4.1 million.
8. "Avengers: Age of Ultron," $3.6 million.
9. "Tomorrowland," $3.4 million.
10. "Love & Mercy," $1.8 million.

world," said Nick Carpow, Universal's President of Domestic Distribution.

Directed by Colin Trevorrow and executive produced by Steven Spielberg, "Jurassic World" is the third in a series of blockbusters for star Chris Pratt, who also starred in the 2014 box office hits "Guardians of the Galaxy" and "The Lego Movie."

"He's like Jimmy Stewart with a leather vest and muscles," Dergarabedian said. "He's a great modern-day action hero."

This is also likely not the last "Jurassic" film audiences will see. Pratt has stated in interviews that he has signed on for future installments, but right now, Universal is focusing on what's in theaters.

"Jurassic World" is just the latest hit for Universal in 2015, following "Fifty Shades of Grey" and "Furious 7."

No studio even tried to compete with the unbeatable dinosaurs this weekend, and thus holdovers populated the rest of the top five. Melissa McCarthy's "Spy" earned $16 million in its second weekend in theaters, bringing its domestic total to $56.9 million. "San Andreas" added another $11 million, and "Insidious Chapter 3" and "Pitch Perfect 2" took the fourth and fifth spots, with $7.3 million and $6 million, respectively.

The dino-sized debut of "Jurassic World" is of utmost importance to the industry, too, which has seen three consecutive down weekends in what was supposed to be a record-setting summer.

"We got the wind back in the summer sails," said Dergarabedian, citing upcoming films like "Inside Out," "Mission: Impossible-Rogue Nation," and "Ted 2" as some of the big films on the way. "This gets the summer back on track."
