WEBSTER PARISH POLICE JURY

Jury: Mowing to begin soon in ditches

The Webster Parish Police Jury is asking its constituents to be patient as they make their way across the parish to bush hog.
Juror Steve Ramsey says

they've been getting phone calls and complaints about the high grass, and he says due to the extremely wet weather, it's difficult to get down into the ditches to

"Bush hogging is behind schedule due to all the rain we've had," Ramsey said. "We just haven't been able to get to it, because it's just been too wet."

The normal schedule, he says, is to start in the Doyline area, work their way south and then north. However, this time, they've started in the north end and will work their way to Doyline, then south.

They are mowing between Cullen and Sarepta currently.

Ramsey is just asking citizens to bear with them as they get to all the areas that need to be cut as soon as Public works director Teddy Holloway says bushhogging season usually begins around the end of March, depending on the weather and ends around November.

"The ditches are wet, and even if we have pretty weather, the ditches still hold water," he said, "so they can't mow. The wet weather is the main problem."

The work is contracted out and the company hired has four tractors and bush

Loggers may soon be responsible for cleanup if the Webster Parish Police Jury amends its road ordinance to allow it in their permitting process.

During the road committee meeting Tuesday, police jurors discussed the issue, claiming loggers are making a mess of the roads when they leave a tract of land, leaving behind large amounts of dirt and debris.

Minden Police Chief Steve Cropper says they've been looking for Coleman on the warrant for a while.

"Officers got information as to where he was, and when they got there, he was hiding under a cabinet underneath the kitchen sink," he said. "They were trying to get him into the car, and that's when he resisted." According to reports, Coleman was taken into custody without incident, but when they tried to put him into the patrol unit, he kicked one officer numerous times. They were able to get him in the patrol unit where he was transported to the Minden Police Station for booking.

Cropper says the warrant stemmed from an altercation between Coleman and his girlfriend where he punched her in the face, arm, and other places. She filed the report on June 20, he says.

nance..." he said. "You can do it a number of different ways."

Every time a logger moves to a new tract of land within the parish, they must get a new permit number, parish officials say.

The committee agreed to get Jackson and Road Superintendent Teddy Holloway to work together on an amendment to the ordinance to reflect those changes.

"The problem is none of those loggers are going to have a broom to clean off the roads," Ramsey said. "We're going to have to go in there with our sweeper and clean it up."

Jackson says the logging company can be charged for cleanup in the permit process.

To be clear, these charges may not apply to temporary permits, but it is more focused on the more permanent permits. The only places loggers can be made to put rock is on the parish's rights-of-way and parish roads.

Juror Daniel Thomas made it clear that he wants in the permitting process that the company has to meet with parish officials, like the road superintendent, before obtaining the permit and beginning work.

"All it's going to say is at the discretion of the highway department to implement mud control measures on parish roads and through parish rights-of ways," Jackson said of the amendment. "It won't be limited to industry; it'll be for people crossing our rights-of-way."

Jackson says there may be unintended consequences of the ordinance amendment, but changes can be made as they go.

Shreveport philanthropist Virginia Shehee dies at 91

SHREVEPORT — Shreveport businesswoman and philanthropist Virginia Kilpatrick Shehee, who was also a former state senator, has died after a long illness. Shehee died late Monday. She was 91 years old.

'The city of Shreveport has lost a servant leader with the death of Mrs. Shehee," Mayor Ollie Tyler said in a statement Tuesday. "She was a true friend and supporter who not only touched my life, but the lives of so many in this city and state. She had a strong vision of what Shreveport could become and she was not afraid to get kneedeep in the trenches to make this city a better place for everyone.'

Shehee was the first woman elected to the Louisiana State Senate who did not succeed her husband. She served one term, from 1976 to 1980, representing parts of Caddo and DeSoto parishes.

Former U.S. Sen. Mary Landrieu said she's known Šhehee for most of her life and she will be remembered and missed for

"Sen. Virginia Shehee was a force of nature," Landrieu said. "She was a passionate, smart and politically astute woman who did not accept the world as it was presented to her but shaped it in the way she thought it should be. For Shreveport and the state of Louisiana, this characteristic was a blessing.

'From Barksdale Ăir Force Base to the cyber innovation center, the biomedical district, the arts and education communities all benefited from her vision and generosity.

Many things came about for Shreveport through Shehee's assistance, former U.S. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr. told The

"Everybody wanted to be with her," he said. "She was charismatic. She was warm. She had everything people looked for in a leader, but there was not a sharp edge in her personality.

Even twisting arms, Shehee was gentle, he said. "She was so Shehee's family owns Kilpatrick Life Insurance and Rose-Neath Funeral Homes, founded by her father in the 1930s. She was also a trustee at Centenary College, where the school's baseball stadium is named in honor of her late husband, Peyton She-

Many people knew Shehee for her philanthropy. She was a major supporter of the Strand Theatre, the Shreveport Symphony and Shreveport-Bossier Community Renewal. Kilpatrick Life is a major contributor to Louisiana Public Broadcasting. She was a leader in establishing the Biomedical Research foundation, which was renamed in her honor in 1996.

U.S. Sen. David Vitter and his wife, Wendy, offered condolences to the Shehee family.

"She's always been a close friend to us. Whether it was business, public service, philanthropy or supporting her family, friends and community - Virginia was one of the best," he Louisiana Senate President John Alario Jr. said he and his colleagues were saddened to hear of Shehee's death. "She left a lasting positive impact on the state of Louisiana not only through her service in the Louisiana Senate, but also through her decades of service to her community. She was dedicated to and driven by her desire to improve the lives of the citizens of Louisiana and she did just that.'

Shehee is survived by three daughters, Ann Shane Shehee, Nell Elizabeth Shehee Kramer and Margaret Shehee Cole, and a son, Andrew Michael Shehee.

'What I did on my summer vacation'

Tales of summer fun, from crawfishing to not dancing

JUANITA AGAN

Special to the Press-Herald

During the depression, in the early thirties, my mother and I visited her brother each summer. My uncle Louis had several children, a son, Otis, my age, about 8 or 9,, and another son, Bill, a son, Lynn, and a daughter, Lucille, who was older than

I. (I didn't think she was, Ι thought was just as old as she was.) They lived near Alexandria, maybe not traditional French country, there were a great many French speaking people who lived there - they did not speak textbook French, but a patois. It gave such a lilt to their speech. Many of my cousins' friends were among these people. Uncle Louis' second wife (the mother of his children had died) was a French woman whose family name was Du Bois. I loved to hear her sing the little songs in her French dialect.

Visiting the Farm

It was so much fun to visit them, because their lifestyle was so different than ours. We lived in Shreveport and they lived on a farm, and had the usual farm animals such as cows, horses, pigs and chickens.

At least once a week they got together their provisions and we all walked down to a nearby river. Fish were plentiful and all along the banks of the stream in the shallow water were crawfish - big, big crawfish. My aunt Georgia had brought along a big cast iron skillet, a big coffeepot, meal, salt, lard, onions, and, of course, coffee for the pot. There was a big pan of cornbread that had been baked for the fish fry. Serving utensils were packed to carry, too.

Outdoor Cooking The boys quickly gathered enough wood for the fire and while the others fished, they got a good fire going to fry the fish. I went along with the cousins as they waded out into the shallow water along the bank and quickly nabbed several crawfish. They were adept in pinching off the tails, peeling and deveining them, quickly. The three of them worked and in just a short time there was a large pan of crawfish tails ready to fry. Meanwhile Uncle Louis, my mother, and the older cousin had caught several nice size fish. The men cleaned the fish while my Aunt Georgia mealed and fried the crawfish tails. The fish, when they had been cleaned and filleted, soon were fried to a golden brown. There on the banks of the stream under big shade trees we enjoyed our fish supper. There was no tea that I love with my fish today with lemon, nor was there french fries, hush puppies nor slaw. Just fish, cornbread, onions and black coffee. The coffee grounds had been boiled in the water and the resulting brew had to be strained to keep from getting grounds in your cup of coffee (black coffee.)

A Delicacy?

These were the hard times of the depression. I knew that with such a large family meal planning was hard as well as expensive because it took a lot of food for three sons and a daughter. And so, I just associated crawfish with hard times and the depression. I thought you had to be in a really bad financial shape to eat crawfish. The fish was alright because that was an accepted food in my home, but crawfish? That was another story. So, it came as a great surprise to find that now most people consider crawfish a delicacy. Recently I ate some again and then remembered how good they were.

A Scarring Fall

Among the other things I learned on those visits was my experience with horseback riding. There was one gentle old horse that allowed the three younger children to ride her at once. They did not put a saddle on or a bridle. They just piled on and guided her with a pat on the neck and she slowly plodded until they reached their destination. Now when I came they invited me to join them in their ride. Somebody put me up behind the third person on the horse's back. with three people already in place I found myself sitting on the part of the horse's rump that started to slope down to the tail.

After a few trips over some terraces, I found as the horse started over the next one that I was slipping off the back. In desperation, I grabbed everything, and I do mean EVERY-THING, as I passed by, including her tail, on my way to the ground. I wound up on the ground between her feet.

Patiently she stood still while they scrambled down and got me out from under the horse. The horse had sense enough to know that I did not have sense enough to ride that way, and so she did not step on me. That ended my horseback riding forever.

Dancing

On Saturday nights the young people of the community gathered at my uncle's home. My mother had forbidden me to ever dance and she did not want me to even be where there was dancing.

My cousins had an old wind-up victrola and it would play one record until you wound it again and it played another

The nights were hot without air conditioning or even fans. But these young people whirled around the open floor, sometimes almost running into each other. The furniture was pushed back but still the room was small and there were a good many young people who came in to dance besides my four cousins. I was fascinated. I had never seen dancing before, and I have never seen dancing just like the ones they did since. I think it must have been a French custom to dance the way they did. But it really looked like fun and they had a wonderful time.

War Stories

On an adjoining farm there was a Johnson family. The old father in the family must have been at least in his eighties. Late in the afternoon he would often walk down to my uncle's house and sit on the front porch, and rock. From time to time he would doze off, perhaps he dreamed, and sometimes he talked in a low voice. I had never seen anybody like him with his long white beard. I listened as he told of how during the battle that blood ran down the hill like water. I discovered that he had fought as a boy of about 16 at the Battle of Shiloh during the Civil War. As he dreamed he relived the horror of battle. He would stay for a time, drink a cup of coffee, and then slowly walk back home. While my son John attended Ole Miss, I visited him and he carried me to see the battlefield at Shiloh, and he pointed out the pond that had filled with blood dring the battle. This coincided with the old man's memo-

Happy Times

Later my cousin, Lucille, grew up and married one of the boys with the French name - LeMoine. As I look back I remember all the happy times, I remember my first crawfish, and I remember seeing the first dancing I had ever seen. I can't forget my one horseback ride. I also remember that there was a shortage of money but not a shortage of love. Those were happy times.

Now, if I were in grammar school I would entitle this "What I did on my summer vacation."

EDITORIAL ROUND UP

Angeles Times on Texas' abortion

The Supreme Court's decision Tuesday to allow nearly a dozen Texas abortion clinics to stay open while it considers whether to review an onerous new anti-abortion law was not just a welcome course of action for women in that state. It was also a promising indication that the court is concerned about the burdensome and unnecessary law, which requires clinics to be outfitted as ambulatory surgical centers and doctors to have admitting privileges at nearby hospitals. If the law had gone fully into effect Wednesday, it would have shuttered 10 more abortion clinics and left Texas with just nine clinics operating. The law's admitting privileges requirement, which went into effect in 2013, has already forced more than half of Texas' 41 clinics to close. For some women, particularly in rural areas, the nearest abortion clinic could be as far as 200 miles away.

Like similar restrictions on abortion passed in other states, the Texas law is nothing more than an attempt to curtail constitutionally protected access to the procedure — justified on the cynical pretext of protecting women's health and safety. Both the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American Medical Assn. filed a brief in 2013 opposing the law after it was

The two medical groups called abortion "one of the safest medical procedures performed in the United States." The brief said there was no medically sound reason for Texas to require abortion providers to have admitting privileges or to impose more stringent requirements on facilities providing abortions than on those providing procedures with similar or greater risks — including colonoscopies, vasectomies, dental extractions and laser eye surgeries. (All of those procedures can be done in clinic settings or doctors' offices.)

More than 90% of abortions in the United States are performed in outpatient settings. There is a less than 0.3% risk of major complications following an abortion, and the risk of complications arising specifically from first-term abortions is 0.05%, according to the brief.

In some other states that have required admitting privileges and surgical center standards, abortion providers and women's health advocates have successfully challenged the laws. Where challenges have been unsuccessful, sometimes providers have negotiated with regulators or applied for waivers to the laws. But Texas stands out for being a state with some of the most stringent requirements for abortion facilities.

hear the health care providers' challenge of the 5th Circuit Court decision letting this law stand. The court should strike down this law and make clear that the Texas law and others like it that purport to protect women's health and safety instead put an undue burden on those seeking an abortion, and are unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court should

PERSPECTIVE

Fiddling away the future

Let's list major problems affecting black Americans. Topping the list is the breakdown in the black family, where only a third of black children are raised in two-parent households. Actually, the term "breakdown" is incorrect. Families do not form in the first place. Nationally, there is a black illegitimacy rate of 72 percent. In some urban areas, the percentage is much greater. Blacks constitute more than 50 percent of murder victims, where roughly 7,000 blacks are murdered each year. Ninetyfive percent of the time, the perpetrator is another black. If a black youngster does graduate from high school, it is highly likely that he can read, write and compute no better than a white seventh- or eighth-grader. These are the major problems that face black Ameri-

Let's look at some of the strategy since the beginning of the civil rights movement. The black power movement of the '60s and '70s held that black underrepresentation in the political arena was a major problem. It was argued that the election of more black officials as congressmen, mayors and city council members would mean economic power, better neighborhoods and better schools. Forty-three years ago, there were roughly 1,500 black elected officials nationwide. According to the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, by 2011 there were roughly 10,500 black elected officials, including a black president. But what were the

By most any measure, the problems are worse. There is the greatest black poverty, poorest education, highest crime and greatest family instability in cities such as: Detroit, Št. Louis, Oakland, Calif., Memphis, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., Atlanta, Baltiand Buffalo, N.Y. The most common characteristic of these predominantly black cratic and presumably liberal administrations. What's more is that in most of these cities, blacks have been mayors, chiefs of police, school superintendents pals and nated city councils.

power has not lived up should the American flag. What about Memphis Mayor A C Wharton's proposal to "help" his black constituents? He has proposed to dig up the bodies of Confederrest and his wife and remove them from a city park. One wonders whether he thinks marshaling resources to do that is more important than dealing with the city's 145 murders, 320 rapes, 6,900 aggravated assault calls, and 3,000 robberies. All of the Memphis black homicide victims were murdered by other blacks.

What about a ban on the use of the "racist" term "thug" in reference to black criminals looting stores? How about a ban on "stop and frisk" and proactive policing as a measure to increase public safety in high-crime neighborhoods? What about more teaching, as New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio has done, that what blacks need to fear most are white policemen? In the wake of the Charleston murders, some people promote the false narrative that it's white racists who are the interracial murderers. That's nonsense. FBI crime victimization surveys show that blacks commit 80 percent of all interracial violent crime. The bottom line is that even if white people were to become angels tomorrow, it would do nothing for the problems plaguing a large segment of the black community. Illegitimacy, family breakdown, crime and fraudulent education are devastating problems, but they are not civil rights problems. There is little or nothing that government or white people can do to solve these problems. The solution lies with black people. Walter E. Williams is a professor of economics at George Mason University.

EDITORIAL ROUND UP Advocate on Donald Trump

In striking a business arrangement with Donald Trump, maybe Baton Rouge and state officials considered the possibility that Trump would shoot off his mouth and spoil the deal.

There's ample precedent, after all, for Trump making a fool of himself when he speaks. If the multimillionaire real estate developer and professional boor is going to be a part of Louisiana's cultural economy, then maybe prepping for Trump eruptions should be included in the state's disaster response plan, just like floods and hurricanes.

"Disaster" is perhaps not too strong a word for what's happened to the Miss USA pageant, which will be staged in Baton Rouge on July 12, the second consecutive year that the contest has been held in the city. Trump owns the company that operates the event, and area officials offered the pageant some $545,000 in tax money this year, most of it from East Baton Rouge city-parish government, to bring the event to Louisiana. What officials hoped to buy with all that cash was a lot of attention for Baton Rouge and Louisiana, thanks to a national broadcast of the pageant.

But in announcing his presidential candidacy, which seemed more like an exercise in publicity than political engagement, Trump disparaged Mexican immigrants as drug dealers and rapists, a jeremiad worthy of David Duke.

Understandably scandalized, both the Spanish language network Univision and NBC canceled plans to broadcast the pageant. Without that TV coverage, local taxpayers might end up subsidizing a pageant that gets less viewers than the latest cat video. That's a sad development given all the hard work of many wellmeaning officials and volunteers in hosting this event in Baton Rouge. The lack of a TV sponsor for the pageant is also a disappointment for the contestants who have spent so much effort to get this far.

Lt. Gov. Jay Dardenne, who manages the state's relatively small share of the incentive package, said the state won't cough up its promised $65,000 in funding if the pageant isn't broadcast. Whether Baton Rouge officials can or will rescind the hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax money they've promised to Trump is unclear at this point.

Such generosity has made us an easy mark, we're afraid, but we hope the Miss USA pageant's troubles offer a cautionary lesson in the pitfalls of these public-private partnerships.

No one, especially taxpayers, should end up as a chump for Trump.

I had never known before that there was such a thing as "Cleaning Vinegar." Ludy explained it could either be in the grocery store's cleaning supply isle or located with the vinegars. I found it to be with the vinegars in Walmart's on the bottom shelf. I purchased the 64 oz. (2 gt.) "White House all natural Cleaning Vinegar, Lemon Scent." With this "recipe" it should last for a long, long time.

I am grateful to Ludy for sharing this "recipe" with me and permission to pass it along to the Minden Press-Herald.

HOMEMADE BATHTUB CLEANING SOLUTION (Not Edible)

*1 cup Heinz Cleaning Vinegar

1 cup Blue Dawn Dishwasher Solution

Heat vinegar and pour into a spray bottle. Add Dawn to the Cleaning Vinegar and shake together. It will be a little thick. Spray mixture into and around bathtub; leave for 1 hour. Then just rinse; no more scrubbing.

*Cleansing Vinegar may be found either with the regular vinegar isle or with the cleaning supplies.

NFL to play more games in England

LONDON (AP) — The NFL will play a minimum of two regular-season games a year at Premier League club Tottenham's new stadium over a 10year period under a deal announced Wednesday.

Tottenham's 61,000-seat stadium is expected to open in the summer of 2018 and will feature a retractable grass field with an artificial surface underneath that would be used for NFL games.

"With growing enthusiasm for the NFL in the United Kingdom, we are committed to hosting NFL games in world-class venues and are excited to partner with Tottenham Hotspur to play games at their future stadium," NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said in a statement.

The NFL currently has two years remaining on its deal with Wembley Stadium, where it has staged 11 regular-season games since 2007. Wembley will host three more NFL games this year.

The NFL said t is "optimistic" the relationship with Wembley will be extended beyond 2016.

APACHE FOOTBALL

GLENBROOK GETS THEIR GUY

BLAKE BRANCH blake@press-herald.com

With six weeks to go until the start of their season, Glenbrook School has hired 22 year-old Caleb Carmikle as its next head football coach.

When Chris Norton departed for Marvel, Arkansas just weeks ago, Glenbrook set their sites on a coach who would bring stability and fire into the program.

Glenbrook headmaster Darden Gladney and Athletic Director Jeff Dalton believe they will get both with Carmikle.

"We realize that this is an important hire for the Glenbrook football program," Dalton said. "We have to get some stability within our program, and Mr. Gladney and I both believe Coach Carmikle is the guy who can give us that."

This will be the first head coaching gig for the Arkansas Tech graduate.

"I saw the job opening and did a little graduate."

and did a little research on the school," Carmikle said. "I actually spoke with coach Norton for about an hour on the phone and he told me the situation here was great. When I interviewed and visited I kind of fell in love with the place."

The Heber Springs, Arkansas native coached wide receivers and defensive backs at Conway Christian School, Dover School Clarksville High School, as well as one season coaching slot receivers at Arkansas Tech.

"I want to come in and get some young energy going," Carmikle said. "I want to get the Glenbrook community the excited about football, and that means getting every able-bodied male student out to play foot-

Carmikle said the offense he will implement will be a hybrid of sorts between the Gus Malzahn/Auburn running game and the Mike Leach air raid.

"I would love to throw it 100 times if we can," Carmikle said. "But we're going to take what the defense gives us. Whatever we do, we're going to preach balance and efficiency.'

With opening kickoff approaching, Carmikle doesn't believe he has the time to implement his entire scheme, but hopes he can instill the core values and fundamentals the Apaches will need for long-term

"I want to bring an exciting style of football to Glenbrook," Carmikle said. "I can't promise wins and losses, but our goal is to get better every day and I feel like if we do that the scoreboard will take care of itself."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL Attorney: Johnson not the agressor

Former Florida State arterback De'Andre quarterback Johnson's attorney, Jose Baez, told NBC News on Tuesday that his 19-year-old client punched a woman in the face after she called him racial epithets and provoked him.

Johnson, a redshirt freshman from Jacksonville, Florida, was dismissed from FSU's team by coach Jimbo Fisher on Monday night, hours after the state's attorney's office released surveillance video of him striking the 21-yearwoman in a Tallahassee, Florida, bar on June 24.

Johnson, who was named "Mr. Football" in immediately."

Florida as a senior at First Coast High School in 2014, is charged with misdemeanor battery. Baez said the woman raised her fist and shouted "racial epithets" at Johnson after he accidentally made contact with her while they waited to order at the bar.

Baez said Johnson tried to "de-escalate the situation," but the woman "kneed him in the groin area" and "took another swing before he retaliated."
"It wasn't until she struck him twice that he reacted," Baez told NBC. "But he is very ... he is very regretful that he didn't turn around and walk away

Raid spotlights Subway pitchman's ties to ex-foundation head

ZIONSVILLE, Ind. — A raid at the home of an restaurant spokesman is casting a glaring spotlight on his relationship with the former head of a foundation he set up to combat childhood obesity.

Federal and state authorities raided the home of Subway pitchman Jared Fogle on Tuesday, just two months after the then-executive director of Fogle's foundation was arrested on child pornography charges.

Authorities wouldn't describe the nature of the investigation or what they hoped to find on electronics removed from Fogle's house. Fogle's attorney said his client, known by millions as "The Subway Guy," was cooperating with investigators.

Subway said in a statement that it believed the raid was "related to a prior investigation" of a former employee of the Jared Foundation, an organization founded by Fogle to raise awareness about childhood obesity. The whether that employee was former foundation executive director Russell Taylor.

Federal prosecutors in May filed a criminal complaint charging Taylor, 43, with seven counts of production of child pornography and one count of possession of child pornography. Investigators said they discovered a cache of sexually explicit photos and videos Taylor allegedly produced by secretly filming minor children at his ment after the charges cooperate, were filed saying he was shocked by the allegations and was severing all ties with Taylor.

Fogle declined to comment as he left his home Tuesday, the hood of a blue rain jacket pulled over his Attorney Ron Elberger said in a statement that his client had not been arrested or charged. "Jared has been cooper-Fogle issued a state- ating, and continues to cooperate with authorities with enforcement in their investigation of unspecified charges, and looks forward to its conclusion," Elberger

Subway removed references to Fogle from its website and issued another statement, saving the two had "mutually agreed to suspend their relationship due to the current investigation."

"Jared and he expects no actions to be forthcoming," the company said. "Both Jared and Subway agree that this was the appropriate step to take."

Fogle, 37, became the restaurant chain's pitchman after shedding 245 pounds more than 15 years ago, in part by regularly eating Subway sandwiches. Subway began featuring Fogle in commercials soon after, and his story was instrumental in giving the years. sandwich chain an image as a healthy place to eat. Neighbors said Fogle and his wife entertained frequently and would say hello but that they didn't see the couple outside a Jacob Schrader, 19, who lives across from Fogle's house, said the pitchman seems "like a pretty private guy" and that he'd only seen him about a dozen times in the last five or six

"He's like an endangered species or something like that," Schrader said.

Subway, which is based in Milford, Connecticut, and is privately held, has struggled in recent years. Last year, industry tracker Technomic said average sales for Subway stores in the U.S. declined 3 percent from the previous year. The company has about 44,000 locations the around world.
