Armed robber gets 35 years

MICHELLE BATES michelle@press-herald.com

A convicted armed robber was sentenced to 35 years in prison Monday. Brian Gilbert's sentence was handed down by 26th Judicial District Judge Jeff Cox. Gilbert pled guilty to armed robbery with the use of a firearm and was sentenced to 35 years at hard labor with the Louisiana Department of Corrections without the benefit of parole, probation or suspension of sentence. He will receive credit for time served, and it was recommended he seek substance abuse treatment.

The charges of conspiracy to commit armed robbery and illegal possession of a stolen firearm were dismissed.

Gilbert was named as the gunman in the armed robbery of Harris Corner Store in Minden, when he and codefendant Ladarrius Shelton were reported to have stolen money from the store at gunpoint.

Shelton was also sentenced Monday on the charge of attempted first degree robbery. He was sentenced to 14 years at hard labor with the Louisiana Department of Corrections. He will receive credit for time served, and it was recommended he seek substance abuse treatment while incarcerated.

In June, a mistrial was declared in Shelton's case, and then he pled guilty to attempted first degree robbery immediately following his trial, says assistant district attorney Hugo Holland in an email to the Press-Herald in June.

Had Gilbert been convicted at trial, he faced 49 and a half to 198 years in prison because of a prior felony conviction, Holland said.

Doyline High School transitions to block schedule

michelle@press-herald.com

Doyline High School will transition to the block schedule when school starts next week.

Principal Bridget Bridges gave a presentation at Monday's Webster Parish School Board meeting on the research she and the faculty and staff have done before making the decision. She says overall, going to the 4x4 block schedule will offer more opportunities.

"We just wanted to provide better opportunities for our students," she said. During the presentation, she gave some reasons why going to a block schedule would benefit Doyline.

One of the benefits include offering a stronger class selection, like more core electives rather than the traditional ones alone. Bridges says they will be able to offer an extra science or social studies course. They will also be able to offer more college level courses for their dual enrollment program, like sociology or psychology.

Doyline's school improvement team did extensive research into moving the school to a full block schedule. They visited schools that were similar in demographics such as Monterray High School and Negreet High School in Sabine Parish.

"We pulled all the school report cards and those have the two closest demographics to Doyline," Bridges said. "We looked at their schedules and their extracurricular activities, just kind of a day in the life of their school."

And they were encouraged by what they saw, she

Last year, Doyline was classified as a modified block schedule, a 2x2, which means only the English Language Arts courses were on a block schedule. Now Doyline will be classified as a full block schedule, or a 4x4, with four classes in the first semester and four classes in the second

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Dan Rawls has been pushing for the block schedule for all the high schools in the parish, saying it just works better. North Webster High School is the only high school in the parish still on a seven-period day.

"It starts opening up the curriculum to offer more things to the kids, and that's what we want to do," he said. "We want to work out a (memorandum of understanding) with the community college so some of the professors can come and teach some of those classes. Before, you didn't have time for those teachers to come in and teach; now there is. That's just one factor."

Block scheduling offers more advantages in that teachers are given more preparation time, more time to grade papers and it also gives teachers more time with their students.

One of the factors specifically for Doyline, Bridges says, is it will increase consistency for transfer students. Lakeside, Minden and Haughton high schools are all feeder schools into Doyline for transients or students who move often. With all three of those schools already running on a block schedule, it decreases the upset and potential course credit disruption between schools.

Some of the disadvantages to students, based on the school improvement team's research, include absences are harder to make up, more extensive homework, boredom or possibly a harder time keeping up.

However, Bridges feels the advantages outweigh the disadvantages.

"It's going to be a transition for both our teachers and out students, but the opportunities are well worth trying for our kids," she said.

CARS TANGLE MONDAY MORNING

A car crash on Shreveport Road Monday morning left two with minor injuries. Minden Police say, Scott Hickingbottom, of Minden, was leaving the parking lot of the Circle K convenience store in his Ford F250 pickup truck. A dump truck was stopped to let him out, and Keisha Hawkins, also of Minden, pulled out around him in her Chevy Suburban and hit Hickingbottom. Police say Hawkins and her passenger, Shonda Wofford, received minor injuries. No citations were issued, and Hickingbottom was not injured. Bruce Franklin/Press-Herald evaluation, the board will consider renewing Rawls'

His notice to continue his employment must be submitted 120 days before the expiration of his current contract. Then the board must submit an answer either way 90 days before the expiration of his contract.

Rawls says he hopes the board continues his contract because he loves Minden and Webster Parish. Not only that, but he feels the parish has made some real progress during his time

"We're doing well," he said. "We're doing some good things.'

Some of the things the board wanted to see at the time of his hire, he says, is to improve the graduation rate, improve the school performance scores and test scores.

He says those things have been done, but with the sweeping changes in testing, it's hard to say whether test scores have improved, because for at least the last year, the scores don't count.

"I got not one but two emails from (state superintendent) John White telling me not to use those numbers, because it's been corrupted," he said. "As far as internally, the trend data from 2012-13, 2013-14 and 2014-15, out of six subjects, five out of the six have increased. Those are the kinds of things I look at."

If his contract is extended, he says he'd like to focus more on the block schedule for all schools in the parish as well as offering more college credit courses. He also wants to begin incorporating career pathway courses such as a certified nursing assistant program or an ag pathway for students who won't go to college.

He also feels the board will want to increase scores as well.

"I think the board is going to want to increase our district score," he said. "We're performing at a higher level every year. Since I've been here, we have, and we want to continue. And that's not something we give up easily. We don't want to go backward. We want to go forward."

These are just a few of the things he says the board will be looking toward, but once he gets feedback from the evaluation scores, he'll know more.

Rawls will be evaluated on his educational leadership, district management, meeting performance objectives and board and community relations

He is paid a base salary of $120,000 per year.

Complaint leads to marijuana, meth distribution charges

michelle@press-herald.com

Two men were arrested on drug charges following a complaint from a concerned citizen.

Channing William Palmer, 22, of the 700 block of 5th Street NE in Springhill, was arrested July 24, and charged with possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia. Bond was set at $1,700.

Michael Austin Vaughn, 27, of the 600 block of East Spring Street in Taylor, Arkansas, was charged with possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine. Bond was set at $15,000.

According to reports, a concerned citizen called in a complaint in reference to suspected illegal drug use at a camper at Palmer's address. Reports indicate North Webster Narcotic Task Force agents were familiar with the two being involved in illegal drug activity. Agents went to the Springhill residence and Lt. Shawn Baker advised Palmer that he'd in the last couple of weeks. While speaking to Palmer, several knives were seen in plain view where the second subject, Vaughn, was sitting.

During questioning, Vaughn was asked to empty his pockets for officer's safety, and he complied, pulling out a snuff can. When the can was opened, what appeared to be approximately five grams of methamphetamine was discovered.

Palmer and Vaughn were placed into custody and a further search of the camper revealed suspected marijuana and drug paraphernalia inside. Both were placed under arrest and transported to Bayou Dorcheat Correctional Center for booking.

will alleviate costs the city pays for sewage treatment. "We did a study and it cost us $3.80 a thousand (gallons) to treat sewage, right now we charge $1.85 and we are going to raise it up to $2.95," he said. "We're just going up some, probably not as much as we need to, but it's a step in the right direction." Sewer charges are calculated by the amount of water users consume per month.

Currently, users pay a base sewer rate of $5 for consuming up to 2,000 gallons of water a month. Additionally, they are charged $1.85 for every 1,000 gallons of water used over the 2,000.

Under the new ordinance, the base price for sewer rates will stay the same; however, the charge for every 1,000 gallons of water consumed over the 2,000 will raise to $2.95.

Sanitation Fees

Council members voted 4-1 to raise the current sanitation fee by $4.

Beginning households in the city limits will pay $17, apartments will pay $14.50 and businesses will pay $18.50.

Davis told the council that despite recently problems with the trash services, it was necessary to increase the rate. "I know this is a very unpopular thing to do with all the troubles we have had with our trash collectors recently," he said. "All these increases are already figured into our (proposed 2015-16) budget so we need to approve them so they can go into effect by October.'

District E Councilman Benny Gray said raising the fee was the only way he knew how to help increase revenue to operate the city.

District B Councilwoman Favrine Kennon-Gilbert voted against the increase saying residents shouldn't pay more for trash pickup they aren't currently getting.

"I just have a problem asking citizens to pay additional cost for services that they are not presently getting," she said.

Kennon-Davis told Gilbert that based on his meeting with city-contracted Republic Services, representatives said improvements would start immediately.

District D Councilman Mike Toland says that Minden residents pay less compared to other cities of the same size.

"We're below most other cities our size and way below bigger cities. Others ranged from $17 to $27 a month," he said. "If we go to $17 I don't think we are above what we should be, but we need to provide the services we promised the citizens.'

Davis says he has met with representatives from Republic Services about the recent issues with trash pickup and he plans to meet with others in the coming days.

School's upon us

The summer is quickly passing by and as we look at the calendar, we can hardly believe August is upon us. And before we know it, it will have slipped quietly away.

The beginning of a new school year was always a time of excitement for me. I loved school and each fall I was ready to go back, see my friends and get my hands on new books, paper, pencils, colors and all the other accoutrements associated with learn-

It was thrilling to learn new words and see them come alive for me as I learned to master the process of reading. New worlds that I had never even dreamed of opened up for me.

certain smell that could only be associated with school. Nothing smelled quite like new books, tablets of paper, and chalk dust. I wonder if they still have that familiar smell.

I can remember all the teachers I had, beginning with that first grade teacher that everyone complained about. She was a tough disciplinarian and big brothers and sisters always put the fear of her in the minds of the younger ones. When I was older we seemed to have a lot of new teachers. I later learned that since Shongaloo was a small school, many of the new teachers got their start there. Some quickly

While my little ones were in school, I decided I wanted to go back to school so I enrolled at Southern State College (now SAU) where I earned a bachelors' degree in elementary education. Later, a master's and 30 additional graduate hours from LA TECH.. Friends who were teaching with me said they would never go back to school. But, me? I would have just kept going if I could have drawn a salary. But, it does-

When I walk by the displays, I stop and browse, looking to see if there is anything I can use. And usually, it is. Just last week I came home with a college ruled notebook which they were offering for 17 cents. Who could pass up a deal like that? One can always use another notebook.

I like to re-stock my supply of pens at this time as one can always find a bargain. And last week I brought home a large bulletin board. I have plans for this to display pictures of the grands and great grands. My shelves were getting too full of pictures, so I'll be trying a new method of displaying them.

Governed by Zealots

ronmental rules defeat even environmentalists.

Thomas Collier is a Democrat who managed environmental policy for Bill Clinton and Al Gore. Then he noticed a mining opportunity in Alaska, one he calls "the single largest deposit of gold and silver that is not being developed in the entire world."

Tom's company hired hundreds of people to study the Pebble Mine's potential environmental impact, a first step before asking the Environmental Protection Agency for permission to dig. Usually, the EPA analyzes a company's study, then does its own research, then rules. But in this case, the EPA did something rejected the mine before Pebble even got its application

That's never happened before, says Collier.

So why would the EPA do that? It's simple: the agency has been captured by environmental zealots.

One of the world's biggest environmental groups, the Natural Resources Defense Council, opposed the mine. The NRDC doesn't do science well — it employs mostly lawyers, not scientists but the lawyers are good at raising money by scaring people about supposed environmental "disasters" like mines.

"The things that NRDC is talking about are from an age far in the past," says Tom Collier. "Now you can build a

He points out that two big mines "sit right on the edge of the Fraser River ... the second largest sockeye salmon his group "colluding with fishery in the world. ... No problem with the salmon."

To arouse public opposition to the Pebble Mine, the NRDC funded TV ads that claim the mine will mean a "natural paradise (is) destroyed by a 2,000-foot gaping hole." The mining company will build "huge earthen dams up to 50 stories tall, holding back billions of tons of mining waste." That sounds frightening, because the NRDC doesn't mention that the "waste" is sand not some poisonous chemi-

Actor Robert Redford lent his voice to the ad, claiming, "The EPA has confirmed that the Pebble Mine, a massive gold and copper mine, would devastate Bristol Bay." After watching that ad, I thought the proposed mine must be right next to Bristol Bay, but it turns out that the Bay is 90 miles away.

It also turns out that some NRDC activists now work for the EPA, and although activists aren't supposed to get involved in issues pushed by the agency, they do it anyway. The NRDC's Nancy Stoner became an EPA regulator. Then she wrote her former colleagues, "I am not supposed to set up meetings with NRDC staff," referring to a pledge she signed not to participate in any matters directly involving her former employer. Then she got around these restrictions by qualifying that she could attend such a meeting if "there are enough others in attendance."

Isn't that revealing? It's the evil private-public "revolving door" that activists usually complain about. Stoner later left the EPA to work for still another environmental

She didn't respond to my questions, so I asked NRDC spokesman Bob Deans about regulators" to shut down a mine. He smoothly replied, "NRDC is a source of expertise, and sometimes government takes advantage of that."

It sure does.

I asked Deans, "Are there some mines you don't complain about?"

He said, "Sure." But when I asked him to name "any mines" that NRDC "doesn't oppose," he failed to come up with any.

"NIMBY" used to be the anti-economic-growth refrain. Luddites shouted, "Not in my backyard!" Now, watching bureaucrats stop projects such as the Keystone oil pipeline and the Pebble Mine, it's clear that the phrase has become "BANANA": "Build absolutely nothing anywhere near any-

I wish activists would personally experience the economic devastation that occurs when they block every project that might have a slight impact on nature.

Alaskans who still live near the Pebble Mine site say the activists killed their dreams. "The environmental groups," said Lisa Reimers, "made people believe on TV that everything was going to die."

When Pebble ramped up, Reimers' company employed 215 people. Only six remain. "You see your people struggling and you have to let them go," Reimers told us. "There are no jobs here, and they're angry at you because they think it's your fault."

Propaganda is what the NRDC produces. It shouldn't be the basis for EPA policy. These days, too often, it is because activists and regulators collude. John Stossel is the author of "No, They Can't! Why Government Fails — But Individuals Succeed."

Buzz Buy hosts successful food drive

SPECIAL TO THE PRESS-HERALD

The Buzz Buy #24 convenience store and TBHC Delivers, the largest distributor of Hunt Brothers Pizza, partnered together this month along with Joe LeBlanc Food Bank to help the hungry in Minden by accepting canned good donations in the store.

One in five children in the U.S. are food insecure, according to Feeding America. Many of those children live right here in Minden. That is why Buzz Buy #24, TBHC Delivers and the Joe LeBlanc Food Bank joined together to help feed local families in need.

The food drive took place at Buzz Buy #24 from July 6 through 20. Visitors to the store brought in non-perishable food items or purchased them in-store and dropped them in the donation box at checkout. In exchange, the store and TBHC Delivers provided them with a coupon for one free hunk of Hunt Brothers Pizza upon their next visit to the store.

Buzz Buy #24 worked with the Joe LeBlanc Food Bank to coordinate the drive and have the donated food delivered to local children and families who struggle with hunger.

This food drive is part of a nationwide initiative by TBHC Delivers called Provide, which strives to offer basic life necessities to those in need.

DIXIE BASEBALL & SOFTBALL

BLAKE BRANCH

blake@press-herald.com

Three Minden teams were in action at their respective World Series tournaments Monday night, with two of three picking up big wins.

Here are the results from both Monroe and North Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

> Darlings Minden 7 West Monroe 1

The Minden Dixie Darlings defeated the host of West the tournament, Monroe, by a score of 7-1.

Leading the way for the Darlings were Jacey Adams and Mackenzie McCoy with a triple and single.

They were followed by Addison Monk, Rebecca Mosley, Vivian Still, Kylie Ryan, Lainey Mercer and Lindsey Ryan with base hits.

The Darlings play North Carolina today at 9 a.m.

Angels Minden 6 South Carolina 9

In a back and forth contest, Minden came out on the wrong end versus South Carolina.

Leading the way for the Angels at the plate once again was Lauren Still with a double, followed by Emma Pitman, Emma Earnhardt, Ella Floyd and Sarah Margaret Mosley all with base hits to help the offense.

The Angels will aim to bounce back today against Florida at 10:30 a.m.

> Minden 20 Georgia 1

In a crazy, rain-riddled game, the pitching machine boys from Minden came away with a huge 20-1 win over the Georgia all-stars.

Reagan Coyle, Jaxon Smith and Easton Sanders all finished with doubles at the plate for Minden.

Coyle had a single to go with his double, while Landyn Huddleston, Brody Bower, Brandon Davis, Seth Mangrum and Hunter Sutton all added base hits to round out the Minden offense.

The AA Minden team is on the field right now as rain forced their second game yesterday to this morning.

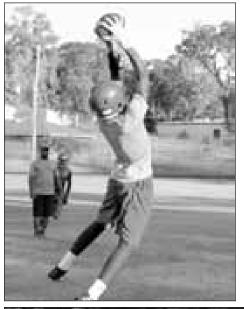

Check back tomorrow for more results.

LOUISIANA OUTDOORS

Whitetails unlimited coming to Lincoln Parish

I remember a week-long stay I had in Door County Wisconsin a few years ago. While there in that spit of land jutting out into Lake Michigan from Green Bay, our group of journalists fished through the ice for white fish and dined on our catch at a traditional fish boil. I had no idea then that we probably drove past the headquarters of one of the fastest growing wildlife conservation groups in the country, Whitetails Unlimited.

Headquartered Sturgeon Bay there in Door County, that organization which was launched in 1982, now sports more than 95,000 supporters around the country with local chapters across the nation, including 16 in Louisiana. August 27 is the date set aside for the establishment of a chapter in our area, the Lincoln Parish chapter, with a banquet set for the Ruston Civic Center on that date.

Brian Andrews is the Louisiana state Field Representative for the organization; he will be conducting the meeting in Ruston and encourages everyone to come out and join this group.

"While our special interest is in promoting the nation's prime game animal, the whitetail deer, we do far more than just con-centrate on deer; we promote virtually anything that promotes the outdoors including hunting and fishing. Our organization works to support such activities as Archery in Schools, providing hunts for special needs individuals, wounded vets and such," said Andrews. "One of the reasons Whitetails Unlimited is such a fast-growing organization is the way we go about hosting these fundraising banquets. I belong to lots of other conservation groups that go a long way toward promoting the sport on which they focus. With Whitetails Unlimited, 50% of the money raised stays in the local area. This means that the local chapter committee makes decision as where they want to spend half of the money raised at the banquet," he added. Marty Edmunds, Ruston, one of the individuals promoting the formation of a local chapter explained what attendees at the banquet on August 27 can expect.

"We'll be providing a barbecue chicken dinner with all the trimmings. There will be a general raffle as well as special raffles for the ladies and youngsters. Local auctioneer, Dusty Taylor, will be conducting the live auction, which will include a special Whitetails Unlimited Weatherby rifle, a Texas deer hunt donated by D and D Outfitters where the person claiming this hunt will be able to set his sights on a 130-150 class buck. This package will include meals and lodging as well,"

Edmunds said. The most impressive aspect of this organization is that 50% of the money we raise at the banquet will go to what we decide it should go to. We can designate our portion of the proceeds to go to such things as a 4-H shooting sports program, Hunter Education, land acquisition, habitat enhancement, special needs youth hunts, training teachers in environmental education as well as proceeds to be used by a local food bank.

"This group is supported by some of the heaviest hitters in the outdoors industry Bad including Buggies, Cuddeback game cameras, Matthews bows, Midway USA and Polaris, as well as other well-known groups," Edmunds added.

The cost for attending the banquet is a very reasonable $40, which includes an annual membership and subscription to the organization's magazine. Also, children age 15 and under and spouses may attend for only $20. One word of note is necessary; tickets will not be sold at the door but must be purchased prior to the banquet. For ticket information, contact Glenn Scriber at 318-680-4658 Marty or Edmunds at 318-413-1348.

Streep finds her inner rocker in 'Ricki and the Flash'

Early on in "Ricki and the Flash," Ricki (Meryl Streep) gets a call that disarms her before she's even decided to pick it up. With smoky eyes, braided rocker hair and a swagger that suggests skin that's as thick as her leather pants, this doesn't seem like a woman who would back down from a challenge.

She hesitates more than once to pick it up — you get the sense that she's either become accustomed to being scolded by the voice on the other end of the line, or has just given up on dealing with that other life completely. It's a small but telling moment in a lovely film laced with intensely human details that allow the audience the opportunity to actually know its characters in ways that so many films come up short.

The voice on the line is her ex-husband Pete (Kevin Kline) and father of her three grown children. He's asking her to come back to Indiana. Their daughter's husband has left her, she's a wreck, and Ricki needs to

Only a few minutes into the movie, we're well on our way to understanding Ricki. We've just seen her hold the attention of a small but enthusiastic audience at a Tarzana neighborhood bar as the lead singer of a rock cover band and then suffer through but tolerate her day job as a clerk at a Los Angeles Whole Foods stand-in with a smirk and

Although there are surprises to come, it's one of the more precise and effective introductions to a character in recent memory. There's no exposition. No voiceover. It's all story advancing character specifics that are amplified by Streep's layered performance as this broke 60-something woman with the spirit and soul of a rebellious, stargazing teenager.

When her cab pulls up to Pete's palatial suburban mansion she gets out, bags and guitar in hand, and asks him for the fare. He's not surprised.

Such a concoction could only come from (or at least make it to the screen via) the mind of "Juno" and "Young Adult" screenwriter Diablo Cody, cinema's songstress of defiant

Ricki's arrival is a tumultuous one as she attempts to reintegrate herself, ever so briefly, in the lives of the family she left and attempt to restore the broken Julie (Mamie Gummer, Streep's real life daughter). Everyone has moved on and no one is afraid to tell her that.

It sounds like the stuff of melodrama, but in the hands of director Jonathan Demme, the story chugs along naturally and subtly with the characters from an awkward showdown at a fancy restaurant to a nostalgia and marijuana-fueled night of bonding over stories and home

In fact, all of the relationships are given an unexpected texture and depth, from the ex-husband's new wife and surrogate mother to the children Maureen (Audra McDonald) to Ricki's more-than-a-friend bandmate

Greg (Rick Springfield). But it's Gummer, Streep and Kline who you wish the camera spent more time with, especially together. Also, beyond the mesmerizing physical resemblance between the real-life mother and daughter pairing, Gummer and Streep both disappear into their respective roles. It helps, probably, that they don't pair up on screen in this capacity often.

The only real contrivance is a late in the film wedding and a third act montage of growth that feels rushed where nothing else

Ultimately, spending time with these people is pleasant, lived-in, honest and even thought-provoking. And when the dialogue stops, there's a fun, golden not-too-oldies live music soundtrack to hum along with "Ricki and the Flash," a Sony Pictures release, is rated PG-13 by the Motion Picture Association of America for "thematic material, brief drug content, sexuality and language." Running time: 102 minutes. Three stars out of four.
