Council highlights successful audit, new appointments, and local cheer team's national triumph

WILL PHILLIPS Minden Press-Herald

The May Minden City Council meeting took place on Monday evening, where the council saw the presentation of the annual audit, approved commission positions and police department hires, and recognized the accomplishments of the local cheer team, Team Power, for their performance at the National Cheerleaders Association Championship.

One of the first items on the agenda was an audit presentation for the 2022/2023 fiscal year by Allen, Green & Williamson, LLP. This is a regularly scheduled annual audit that serves to ensure the City of Minden is following proper procedure when it comes to their finances. Tim Green, CPA Partner, was quick to let the council know that the city received the best opinion possible in regards to the audit.

'You have an unmodified opinion which is the best opinion you can have. It basically says there's no adjustments that we're aware of that need to be made to the financial statements for you to rely on," said Green. "That's the best opinion you get, so you did receive that opinion from us in that regard."

Webster Parish School Board considers joining lawsuit over Title IX changes

AMBER MCDOWN Minden Press-Herald

The Webster Parish School Board (WPSB) convened for their regular meeting on Thursday, May 2, to address a range of important issues, including recognizing outstanding employees, approving educational opportunities for staff, and discussing legal matters impacting education policy. One of the key points of discussion was whether or not to join a lawsuit against the Biden administration over changes to Title IX, a federal statute that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in education programs or activities that receive federal financial assistance. Board members not present were Linda Kinsey, Johnnye Kennon, and Jerry Lott.

The meeting began with routine procedures before moving on to more substantive matters. Kevin Thompson of Taylor and Sons recognized Robin Tucker, personnel director and SFS supervisor, as the Employee of the Month. Details of Ms. Tucker's commendation will be featured in an upcoming article in the Minden Press-Herald.

A significant portion of the meeting was dedicated to the discussion of a lawsuit against the Biden administration changes to Title IX. The amendments to Title IX would challenge 24 state laws that ban transgender youth from participating in sports among other things. Superintendent Rowland explained that joining the lawsuit would involve the board officially becoming a party to the legal action, while supporting the lawsuit would simply indicate the board's agreement with its objectives without direct involvement. Row-Superintendent emphasized the importance of making a decision that evening, as it was the final day to join the lawsuit. However, he also noted that the board could declare a resolution in support of the suit at a later date if they did not wish to decide that evening. He reassured the board that joining the lawsuit would not pose any financial burden, as the Attorney General is litigating at no cost to the

Minden man arrested for vehicular homicide in fatal pedestrian collision

Minden Press-Herald

On May 3, Jacoby Mason, 33, was arrested for vehicular homicide following a tragic incident involving a pedestrian. The incident, which occurred at 1705 S Talton St (Abraham's Food Mart), resulted in the death of Glennis Oliver, who was struck by a vehicle and trapped underneath his own car.

Officer Clingan, who responded to the scene, found Oliver pinned beneath his vehicle after being hit by the suspect vehicle, which had crashed into a building. Dequarius Crawford, identified as the passenger in the suspect vehicle, provided a description of the driver, described as a black male in a white shirt and black shorts, who had fled the scene on foot.

After doing everything he could to ensure Oliver's safety, Officer Clingan located a man fitting the description provided by Crawford, later identified as Jacoby Mason, in the parking lot of Longspring Community Outreach Ministry's parking lot. Mason exhibited signs of impairment, including a strong odor of alcohol, bloodshot eyes, and swaying balance. He was detained and transported back to the scene, where Crawford positively identified him as the driver.

Mason was then arrested and transported to the Minden Police Department for further testing. Standardized Field Sobriety Tests (SFST's) indicated signs of impairment, and a chemical test revealed a Blood Alcohol Content (BAC) of 0.183%. Tragically, Glennis Oliver was pronounced dead at Minden Medical Center.

Mason faces multiple charges, including vehicular homicide, DWI 1st, hit and run, and driving under suspension (DUS). He also had a bench warrant for driving under suspension.

The investigation is ongoing, with video footage of the crash secured from Abraham's Food Mart.

"We've invested a lot of our own money into making this place better, and we'll continue to do so," Rhodes stated. "When this building profits, 80% of the profits will go back to the employees in this building. The other 20% will be donated to a local charity of their [the employees'] choosing. So 100% of the profits from this building will go back into the community."

Rhodes expressed a desire to address issues he sees with corporate healthcare in the U.S., emphasizing his intent to make a positive impact. "I'm not doing this to get rich. I'm doing this because I want to help Minden, and I want to help our grandfathers and grandmothers and moms and dads have a great place to live. They deserve that."

Under the Rhodeses' management, cleanliness, safety, and nutritious meals top the priority list. They also aim to enhance resident experiences by seeking feedback and suggestions from residents and their families.

The roof repair, initiated by the previous owners, will be completed this weekend, weather permitting. Rhodes plans to engage local contractors for this task. The facility's name will change to The Columns of Germantown, reflecting its new direction.

Despite the change in residents' ownership, leases will remain unaffected. However, due to the transition, the facility will be unable to accept ACH payments for the current month but expects to resume next month. In the interim, payments can be made by check, with arrangements available for residents encountering difficulties.

'We're back in control of what happens," Rhodes affirmed, highlighting his commitment to improving residents' lives. The Rhodeses returned to The Columns of Germantown on Sunday, May 5, to further engage with residents and their families, reinforcing their dedication to the community.

COUNCIL

While the city received a favorable audit, there is always room for improvement, and Jennie Henry, CPA Audit Manager, highlighted a few key areas where the city could improve its financial reporting.

Last year there were five findings, and the city successfully addressed two of them, leaving three issues that rolled over. Two of those were combined into one, leaving two areas for the city to improve in.

The first had to do with controls over financial reporting. Some reconciliations bank for smaller accounts in the city were performed annually instead of monthly, a change the firm would like to see be made.

"This has to do with financial reporting in a lot of different fields. It has improved greatly, but it did not improve enough to be considered solved or completed," said Henry. "There were some bank reconciliations that were not performed monthly. They were performed at the end of the year. This had to do with some of the small accounts, it had to do with the police department."

In regards to the police department, the STEP program they had launched in recent years has seen great success as a vehicle to generate revenue for the city. So successful in fact that the program generates so much money, it requires its own proper budget.

"According to state budget law, if you have revenue over $500,000, then you have to have a budget for that fund. In the past, the revenue wasn't over that point, but this year it was substantially over. This year as we saw it was over $750,000. So this year and proceeding will need to have a budget for the STEP program," said Henry.

Another note Henry gave was that of city employees and what computer system access is available to them, noting that some had access to systems outside of their respective fields.

"We look at the computer system access. Who has access to what different systems in the computer. Three employees had access to things that we didn't think fit into their job duties," said Henry.

Later in the meeting some positions within the city were filled, specifically those of a seat on the Minden Main Street Program/Downtown Development Commission and Minden Police Department new hire. It was recommended that the city council appoint Claudine Thomas to fill an unexpired term on the Downtown Development Commission, with the new term set to expire in September of 2025.

Zane Crittenden was recommended by Police Chief Jared McIver to be hired as a full-time police officer. "The good thing with Zane is he's already trained. He's a POST certified officer. He's been working in Dixie Inn and is moving over here to represent the city now for the police department. He's passed all tests that have been required of him and I think he'll be a good asset to the department," said Chief

McIver. council The unanimously passed a motion to adopt an ordinance establishing "no thru truck traffic" signs and penalties for violations thereof. "It's been requested by several citizens that live on Country Club that children are often jumping out of the road because of eighteen wheelers. Also the condition of that road, the city spent a lot of funds redoing it, and the citizens through that area would like to see it be maintained, and we know the best way to do that is to keep heavy truck traffic off of there," said Mayor Cox. At the end of the meeting the mayor also read a proclamation recognizing the achievements of Team Power from Gym 4:13 for defending the championship title at the recent National Cheerleaders Association Championship.

"Whereas Gym 4:13 was honored during their 7th cheer season as members of Team Power defended their title of divisional, national all star champions during the 2024 National Cheerleaders Association Competition held on March 1 2024... we'd like to formally recognize Team Power of Gym 4:13 on this extraordiperformance as nary this team demonstrates the incredible skills, discipline, and sportsmanship at the National Cheerleaders Associa-Championship," tion said Mayor Cox.

The meetings are open for the public to attend, and for those who wish to view the meeting live or after the fact, it is live streamed on the City of Minden's Facebook page and YouTube channel titled City of Minden - Feels Like Home.

Louisiana is Justified in Defying New Biden Transgender Rules in Title IX

I love my dear home of Louisiana and am often proud of it, but never more so than this past week as Governor Jeff Landry, Attorney General Liz Murrill and Louisiana Superintendent of Education, Cade Brumley, announced that the new Biden Title IX rules are unconstitutional, an overreach of federal law and dangerous for biological females. The rule change formalizes the Biden Department of Education's redefinition of the meaning of "sex" to include "gender identity."

Attorney General Murrill stated that these new Title IX regulations are intended to "remake American societal norms through the classrooms, lunchrooms, bathrooms, and locker rooms of American schools."

Louisiana sued the Biden Administration immediately in federal court.

A.G. Murrill recounted the law's history, stating that Title IX was passed to "prevent and protect against pervasive discrimination against biological women." After highlighting the heavy-handedness of the new regulations, she clarified the ultimate point: "The term 'sex' has always been understood to mean biological sex" but now it has been perversely broadened to include "gender identity."

The new regulations are benignly entitled "Nondiscrimination on the Basis of Sex in Education Programs or Activities Receiving Federal Financial Assistance." However, the effects they will have on young females are reckless and dangerous.

As I have noted before, transgender proponents argue that boys who identify as girls actually are girls. No, they're not. And they are definitely not biologically—males clearly have physical advantages over females—and in physical sports, gender and biology really do matter. The fact that even has become a disputed matter is a testament to how unhinged, morally, ethically, our nation has become. At a time when Americans are frequently told to 'follow the science' science is here rejected with the resulting unfairness to female competitors.

This insanity was first advanced in 2022 when President Biden made a striking departure from the previous position on Title IX and issued an order entitled Preventing and Combating Discrimination Based on Gender Identity or Sexual Orientation. The order states in pertinent part that "[a]ll persons should receive equal treatment under the law without regard to their gender identity or sexual orientation." This language may sound like it is grounded in a concern for "equality," but it is not.

Conversely, the Trump Administration specifically reaffirmed the position that public school districts may exclude students from athletic teams based on "gender identity" and could require students to use bathrooms based on biological sex, rather than gender iden-

Again, the real tragedy is that all of the progress of Title IX for females is now threatened by the transgender agenda, which seeks to allow biological males to compete in girl's and women's sports.

Let's also remember that sports and athletics play an integral role in the development of young girls who will be robbed of the opportunity for that growth and development-and athletic scholarships which may be their only chance at college—if forced to compete with biological males.

As tennis great, Martina Navratilova, has said, ""[T] here will always be significant numbers of boys and men who would beat the best girls and women in head-to-head competition. Claims to the contrary are simply a denial of science."

And let's not forget that the national Left—as distinguished from the honorable opposition living in Louisiana—constantly screech about "toxic masculinity." But may I suggest that there is no more damaging and dangerous form of so-called toxic masculinity than transgenderism.

I also note that numerous other states, including Arkansas Governor, Sarah Sanders, joined in the condemnation of the Title IX "revisions," issuing an executive order directing her state's schools to defy the Biden Administration's expansion of Title IX. She asserted her state's commitment to preserving the traditional understanding of sex as an "immutable characteristic of the human body" firmly "rooted in biology and the created order." (The Epoch Times, C. Pearson, 5-2-24). Sanders asserts that "government should celebrate, not erase, sex differences by providing proper protections for them." She concluded that the Biden Administration "has rejected reality and chosen to appease their left-wing base and advance a radical gender ideology over students' safety and best interests." (Id.)

Let's end this gender delusion and confusion.

The 10th Amendment of our U.S. Constitution provides Louisiana with every right to push back against and reject such federal encroachment into these matters of state control, including the intrinsic meaning of gender, biology, health, and life. I am proud our state is doing so.

What's so wrong with being a whistle blower?

As an activist, who witnessed and experienced child abuse in an orphanage, I must take a stand for those who have no voice.

The Bible says " It were better for im that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones" which I think applies to anyone who is helpless, such as children, the elderly or those who are mentally challenged.

According to Safe Horizon, which is the largest non-profit victim services agency in the Burroughs of New York City, one in ten children are being abused.

How would vou like to be a defenseless child who has no voice? Recently I was talking to someone who thinks we shouldn't be whistle blowers, ones who take a stand on such issues as child abuse which really agitated me, causing me to respond that if we don't report child abuse we are just as guilty as if we had molested or abused the child ourselves!

If not, why not?

I can't help but ask why would anyone not want child abuse exposed?

After being in a loving foster home, I could hardly believe the abusive orphanage where I landed. Rather than be a victim, I decided in October, 1962, at the age of fourteen, that I would make it my mission to expose what often goes on behind closed doors.I was shocked when a ten-year-girl asked me to step into the bathroom with her at In horror I watched her unveil massive layers of blackened bruises beneath her clothing.

Without hesitation I told her "tomorrow we will go to the school nurse." I knew I'd gone against rived back at the home, I boldly hur-PIERCE ried off the bus and told the superintendent who was waiting for us.

Instinctively I knew he was looking for the one who had reported an employee.

I was verbally slapped in the face when he said me he'd tell my housemother because the nurse had kept my name anonymous when she visited the home.

She lectured me for hours, telling me how she had beaten her daughter with a garden hose so severely she had to be put to bed. She didn't dare lay a hand on me because she knew I would report

My punishment was to be one month's grounding -- and I wouldn't be able to bathe or wash my hair. I was to wear the same dirty clothes to school and church for the duration of my grounding.

I suppose she thought this would make me look stupid.

Sixty-one years later I smile because it backfired on her the following Sunday morning when she suddenly remembered that was to be the day of "Open House," when the home showcased our immaculate cottage to display our "wonderful home-like" environment to the many church members who might choose to visit the orphanage and leave a contribution to the "worthy cause" so they might be hoodwinked into feeling good about their generosity as they recalled our plastic smiles and wellgroomed appearance.

Never did my housemother fly so fast to see that the older girls helped me wash, set and dry my hair in a day before blow-dry hair

Though more than half of a century has passed and the abusive housemother was finally fired the following year, and my own sadistic housemother was later fired, I'm proud of the shy, undersized, awkward fourteen year-old girl from the backwoods of Arkansas, who took justice into her own hands back then and continues to do so, being the activist that I am, as I strive to be an advocate, a voice to speak out for those who appear to have no voice!

Even though the orphanage has moved and changed their name court records show abuse still reins while they home school their children which makes it harder to report the abuse.

One house father is serving time in prison for repeatedly raping and sodomizing a young girl in 2003.(She was unable to report the abuse until she went home.)

In 2010 I compiled and published a book of true stories written by these adult children (many in their 50's and 60's) because they wanted to finally be heard to give some closure to what went on back then and perhaps to prevent future

Protecting your camp during the off-season

GLYNN HARRIS

"It was finally the weekend. Spring turkey season had arrived and all Neal Windley of Norfolk, Va., wanted to do was get to his farm, change into his camouflage and get into the woods. What he found when he arrived not only put a halt to his weekend of hunting, it also cost him thousands of dollars in repair and prevention.

"Windley's camp was demolished. Windows were broken, a television and other items were missing and the once clean and comfortable house had been turned into a disaster area. Sadly, that was not the first time this had happened. Vandals had trashed his camp two other times. Sweeping up glass and filling out police reports were not what he had in mind when he and a good friend originally bought the land in the early 1990s."

The above report was part of a news release I received from the National Wild Turkey Federation. The report from the NWTF gives sobering evidence that all too often, hunters head for camp after a long hiatus to find just what Neal Windley found.

The first thing I did after reading the NWTF press release was call a fellow club member to see if he's checked on our camp lately. He no doubt heard my sigh of relief when he reported he was there this past weekend, and everything was as we had left it.

The second thing I did was call the Lincoln Parish Sheriff's office to talk with Steve Rogers who was investigator at the time to see if there have been incidences of hunting camp vandalism and/or theft re-

"It happens here from time to time. It seems that things will be quiet and then we'll get three or four

GEORGE SEACRIST

Philip Seacrist is proud of this nice buck he downed while keeping an eye on his hunting camp during the reports in a week. It's like a rash; it spreads when it breaks out," said Rogers.

There are several things hunting camp owners can do during the off-season to keep criminals from trashing or stealing from your hunting camp, according to Rogers. "First, if your camp has a locked gate, be sure to keep the gate locked. This won't necessarily prevent theft but it makes it harder for thieves to cart off large

"Another important thing is don't leave valuable items, such as 4-wheelers, guns, cookers, lanterns, etc. at the camp. Take them home for the off-season.

"I'd also suggest that you or somebody in your hunting club check on your camp regularly. Also, you might get a neighbor who who you trust to keep an eye out for what may be going on when you're not there. One of the problems we have," Rogers noted, "is that we'll get a report in the fall when hunters arrive at the camp and it may have been broken into in late

"Make an inventory of everything of value in your camp, just like you should be doing in your home. Write down serial numbers, description of each item, and where practical, put some identifying mark on the item in a concealed area so thieves won't be as likely to find and remove it. I'd also suggest taking photos of valuable items to aid in identifying them should they be stolen," said Rog-

Some other suggestions offered by the NWTF is to lives near the camp and make the local authorities aware that the camp will be unoccupied for a designated period of time. Another suggestion is to leave keys to your property's gates with someone in authority to help them watch your place while you are away.

Make sure you have insurance and make sure it includes boats, ATVs or any item that may not be covered under a standard homeowner's or renter's policy.

Put identifying marks or recognizable numbers on tree stands and blinds. This can help law enforcement agents identify these items in the field if they are

Follow these suggestions and you stand a better chance of finding your hunting camp this fall just as you left it . . . except of course for dirt dobber nests and a mouse or two.

Mama—A Proverb 13: 24 Woman

We all have heard the Proverb 31 passage used to describe some women, I am sure. I have, and rightly so! For some women, yes! But my Mama was not in that league. I guess she was in the "minors" compared to a Proverbs 31 model. Proverbs 13:24 better defined her and my daddy! Now she qualified in some of these areas, but she was more of a "workhorse, a dependable servant, with an humble spirit". Being a woman of limited education (school drop-out in grade 7 to help her family make a living), Mama did not spend much time writing or reading. No, to birth seven rowdy Crider children, to help put vittles on the table three times a day, plus keep up with all the other duties of a mother and farmer's wife, made for a very durable and tough package. That's Mama!

With Mama and Daddy, "work" was the name of the game we played. And we played it from daylight until dark. (I'm using the word "played" very loosely!) To waste an hour of daylight "doing nothing" was akin to sin itself! They set the example. Rising early and working late into the night was just what every "decent farm family" did. And we were no exception! When I think of the amount of work they produced, especially my Mama, I am so conscious of their honesty about a "fair day's work". No cheating on Mr. Sunshine. No, sir-ree! Daddy and Mama were a team! And we all had to pull our weight, be it a cotton sack, hoe, or milking cows, feeding hogs or chickens. The persimmon and peach switches were good sources of motivation to produce "good fire in the wood stove was needed to heat water for coffee, to cook biscuits (large pans of them), fry ham and eggs. More hot water was needed to wash and rinse dishes. (Three times a day)! Drinking water had to be pumped, from a hard-to-prime pump outside. Cows were milked and fed, along with other animals. Corn was shucked and shelled for the chickens. Eggs were gathered. Rainwater from barrels standing in the drip of the tin-topped barn was used to fill the wash pot for the weekly washing. Building a fire to heat the wash-water, using home-made lye soap and bluing, were all part of the process of 'gitting the clothes clean'.. The barnyard fence made for a good clothesline. Now the "second" rinse water was usually set in the sunshine for late evening baths. "Waste not"! And who was doing this, or seeing that it got done? Yep! Mama or Granny Crider! (The year I was born, Grandpa Crider died; Granny Crider came to live with us. My parents 'put her to work as soon as she checked in.')

Wood stacked by the kitchen stove was a daily affair. In the winter, the fireplace wood was also needed to "keep the fire alive". The old cast irons used for pressing clothes were on the cook stove or hearth for easy use. In the winter, the warm irons (or brick) were wrapped in towels and placed in the bed to warm the cold feet of kids getting home late from basketball games. Mama was on the job!

My sisters helped with many inside chores along the way while the boys pulled barnyard duty, giving Mama some relief. Hog-killing time meant overtime for sure! Many of the demanding tasks that go with this territory were "assigned" to Mama and Granny. They were always there pushing and shoving, doing their part. That garden seemed like a farm in itself! It seemed like acres to plant, hoe and pick. They were in charge here too. And work it was! Did you ever "stick" English peas, butter beans, green beans, or tomatoes? She was the engineer and consultant in charge, seeing the job was done right. My Mama!

Cooking for a family of ten, including Granny, was a full time job in itself. Now her cooking was not the greatest, but remember I said she was not a Proverb 31 model! But to stick to this routine daily for 50 + years should earn Mama some kind of heavenly reward. I think it did! Granny was there to assist, work behind the scenes and help with clean-up duties.

Mama was always so proud to see us in school activities. All the Crider kids played basketball, so she had many opportunities to see "us shine". There were school plays and other events too. I don't remember Daddy attending many, but Mama was usually there if she could be. She was so proud when I graduated from college.(the first one to ever achieve this honor.) My parents had struggled to make it possible and I knew it! (And there was no student loan to repay or ask it to be forgiven). Mama was able to attend and sit near the front. Proud Mama! Proud me as well!

Time passed and the children moved away. One day a sister from Florida was visiting "home". Mama just "collapsed in her chair", suffering a massive heart attack. Two days later she was gone. At rest now! No more heavy labor and long days of toil for her. No more sacrifices to make. Just eternal rest!

As years pass, I think of Mama, and ask myself, "How did she do it all; Day after day?" That is just what Mamas do, I decided! They have their job and they "just do it". Even today, mothers have hectic schedules and responsibilities. Maybe a little different now than it was in Mama's day! But today, mothers work full time, shop for dinner, cook and serve it, clean house, help with homework, get the kids to bed and then, maybe have a few minutes for their husbands, attend to personal needs and then off to bed so tomorrow's schedule can be honored. Oh, did I mention washing, making beds, cleaning bathrooms, picking up after everyone, etc? Remember that ole saying about "a man's work is from sun to sun, but...?" It really is true. Bet every Mama knew it was!

We will always need our Mamas. Her spirit will always be around! That loving touch, soft voice of encouragement and a swift hand of correction when Proverbs 13: 24 needs to be applied. For those whose mother is no longer around....may God bless you with sweet memories? For those whose mother is living...will you take time to do something special for them this Mother's Day? For all those women who 'mothered' children even though they are not biological mothers, may you be blessed too! Happy Mother's Day to every mother!

Hidden potential

When we are younger our parents love to quote for us the golden rule from Matthew 7:12 "Do to others whatever you than us. God looked at many of the Bib-

LOUISIANA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Jeff McHugh David, Jr. to become LPA's next executive director

Sam Hanna, Jr., to take over as LPA president

A series of leadership changes that have been months in the making are slated to take place in May at Louisiana Press Association and Marketing.

Jeff McHugh David, Jr. is resigning his position as the trade association's board president and took over as the LPA executive director on May 13. Sam Hanna, Jr., will become the board pres-

David replaces Jerry Raehal, who informed the board of directors in December of 2023 of his intent to move closer to family by the summer of 2024, and is moving to Nebraska in

The hiring of David was approved by the board at a January special meeting, allowing for a transition for Raehal to seek a new role and for David to start becoming more acquainted with the roles.

LPA Director Judi Terzotis said after initial review of potential candidates by the hiring committee, an "unexpected candidate put his name in the hat that is just so uniquely suited for this job. It really just stopped the entire process.'

She added, "We all just felt really excited and energized knowing that a transition from Jerry's great work and everything that he has done ... that we could take that work and put it to really good use in the next level, and McHugh seemed like the right person."

For David, increasing revenue, moving forward on state and national legislation, and increasing more member interaction are his top agendas.

'It's an exciting time for the Louisiana Press Association, thanks to the great work from Raehal and the board," David said. "LPA has momentum at both the local and federal level and I'm excited to take the work we have done the past four years and build upon it."

David has previously been president and co-publisher, alongside his mother Nancy, of the Livingston Parish News, which has been in the David family since his grandfather purchased the property in 1962. David assumed the co-publisher position when his father, Jeff McHugh David Sr., died from cancer in October of 2015. David, Jr. followed in his father and grandfather's footsteps and became immediately involved with the LPA and the National Newspaper Association. He is involved with the legislative committees on both levels and has been an LPA board member since 2018.

In order to take the role of executive director, David is relinquishing his title as co-publisher, placing his ownership in trust, and passing both administrative and day-to-day operations to his wife, Melanie, and his mother.

Hanna, Jr., previously served as the LPA Board president from 2000-2022, and been serving as past president since.

Hanna is the president and publisher of The Ouachita Citizen and also a co-owner of the Concordia Sentinel in Ferriday and The Franklin Sun in Winnsboro. The Hanna family has owned and operated newspapers in Louisiana since

A native of Concordia Parish, Hanna graduated from LSU in 1993 with a degree in mass communication. After a brief stint working as a deputy press secretary to a governor, Hanna returned to northeastern Louisiana in 1994 to work at the Concordia Sentinel and The Franklin Sun in more than one capacity - news reporting, advertising and delivery.

Hanna hired Raehal in September 2000 with a goal of helping the LPA and its members transition toward the future. During the tenures of Hanna and David as president, and Raehal as executive director - along with LPA staff, board and support members -- the LPA has made several strides, including:

"I think the hiring of McHugh as executive director and Sam stepping back into board president role are great for the press association," Raehal said. "We've been through a lot during the last four years, and they've been a big part of it. It will make for a much smoother transition as they are well aware of the challenges we're facing."

Raehal's last full-time day at the LPA is set for May 24. He is slated to start working full time for OnePress, which is the Nebraska Press Association's marketing arm, on May 28 in a remote capacity as the company's Chief Growth Officer.

"I'm very grateful to the LPA board, staff and membership for being so welcoming, as well as working with me on this transition," Raehal said. "We've done a lot of great work to move LPA and its membership toward the future and appreciate the help everyone has provided along the GARDENING WITH DR. JOE WHITE

LATE SPRING (APRIL AND MAY) IS A GREAT PERIOD TO IMPROVE YOUR LANDSCAPE APPEARANCE

JOE W. WHITE. PH.D. Extension Horticulturist, (ret) LSU AgCenter May 2024

Lawns are in many respects much like a canvas for a picture. They serve as a background for all of the other plants whether they be flowers, shrubs or trees. This should be incentive enough to want to keep the lawn as attractive as you can. But lawns offer many other benefits. They absorb unwanted sounds, provide a nice surface for playing or relaxing, keep soil stains from ruining indoor carpets and just about eliminate soil erosion.

Keeping a lawn wellgroomed seems to be important to some home owners while others seem not to care about the appearance of their lawn and landscape. Those are the kinds that probably even gripe when they have to prune oversize shrubs that block a door or walk.

April and May (although April has already passed) is considered the optimum time in north Louisiana to do any needed yard work whether it is to establish a turf, renovate the grass or just simply routine maintenance. This is when grass makes its fastest growth thus enabling it to utilize any applied fertilizers. This is the time when several of the lawn herbicides can be used without harming the lawn to get rid of unwanted weeds. Later, when the weather gets really hot many of the herbicides cannot be used as they will harm the turf unless your grass is Bermuda or Zoysia. Be on the watch for some of the common turf diseases and treat with appropriate fungicides. Insects that damage turf grass may begin to appear so any sign of insect damage should be followed with treatment with an insecticide. But don't look for Chinch bugs because they don't usually arrive until the weather gets much hotter. Although fertilizer gives optimum results when applied in mid-April, an application before the end of this month will still be beneficial. Do use recommended products. Do not apply a granular fertilizer to a damp turf or the fertilizer will stick to the grass and cause chemical burn. Applying just before an expected heavy rain is a common practice, but is risky if the forecast is wrong. A better method is to apply the fertilizer to a dry lawn and then turn on irrigation sprinklers at maximum capacity to wash the fertilizer to the base of the turf.

While irrigation may be needed under extreme weather conditions, slowly apply about one inch of water per week under average weather and double the amount if the drought is of long duration.

As some newer varieties of lawn grass may have been introduced since I retired, in addition to common Bermuda there is "Jackpot", "Mirage" and "Mohawk". For St. Augustine (no seed) you can establish your lawn with sprigs or some other vegetative part of the plant and possibly the best variety is "Palmetto". However, "Delmar" and "Raleigh" are good. Three varieties of centipede to look for include "Oaklawn", "Tennessee Hardy" and "Tennturf". Three varieties of zoysia are "El Toro", "Palisades" and "Cavalier".
